'Where's John?' — Demos

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — They waited in the headquarters.

They waited outside. Dukakis supporters covered the entrance to the new Madison County Democratic headquarters on Niedringhaus Avenue on Wednesday evening.

Banners, signs and bumper stickers were there for the asking. Many supporters already sported Dukakis/Bentsen and Costello buttons.

There was a speech to be made and a ribbon to be cut when the Democratic headquarters opened at 8:30 p.m.

A microphone and loudspeaker were set up outside the building, awaiting the arrival of John Dukakis, son of Democratic presidential nominee Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Shortly before 8:30, county Democratic Chairman Bill Harrison approached the microphone. Heads turned in all directions.

This time the question wasn't "Where was George?" It was "Where is John?"

Harrison introduced 21st District campaign coordinator Bob Walsh.

Before Walsh even got to the microphone, mumbling from the crowd hinted the people knew what was coming.

WAITING for John Dukakis are 3-year-old Rachel and 5-year-old Christopher Gregory, Granite City.

"I hate to be the bearer of bad tidings," Walsh said. "But John Dukakis will be unable to be here this evening. He has been called back to Massachusetts."

Dukakis had returned home from St. Louis yesterday afternoon to be with his expectant wife, who is bedridden, suffering a difficult pregnancy, Walsh said.

U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, 21st District, had been previously called to Washington, but his wife Georgia was on hand to perform ribbon-cutting honors.

John Dukakis' visit has been rescheduled for Sunday, Oct. 23, Walsh said.

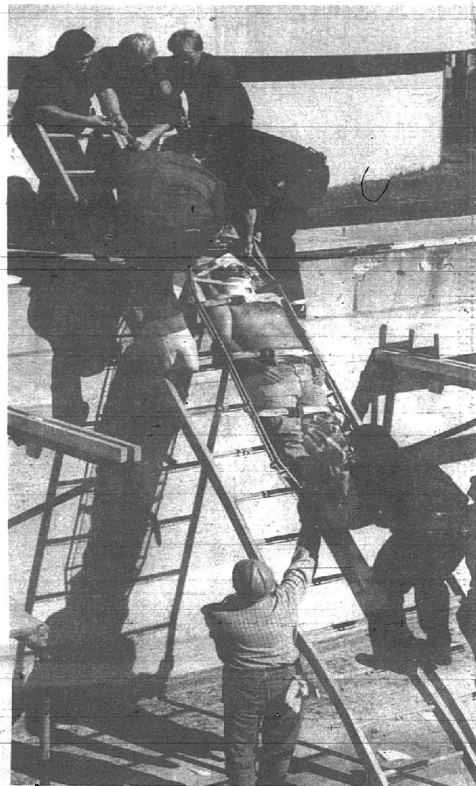

"I have been asked to personally extend his apologies," Walsh told the crowd. "He was in St. Louis this afternoon but then he got the call to return home."

As the crowd dispersed, it seemed that many Democrats who had shown up to voice their support, were sympathetic to Dukakis' plight and had taken the experience in stride.

"I think she overdid it on the campaign trail," Walsh said of Mrs. Dukakis' condition. "She is confined to her bed and she is still offering to make phone calls. It really is a touchy title."

Gale Gallo, 61, of Edwardsville, said she was disappointed but understanding.

"I drove here from Edwardsville to see him tonight," she said. "But what kind of man would he be if he just left his wife like that? I wish he had come, but at least we know he'll make it here later on."

CARPENTER INJURED: Robert Fry, 41, Edwardsville, is lifted by Granite City Fire Department emergency personnel and fellow workers from a clarification tank Wednesday afternoon at the Granite City Wastewater Treatment Plant at the Price Support Center. Fry was injured when he fell into a concrete enclosure being renovated. Fry was admitted to St. Elizabeth Medical Center, where he is in stable condition.

Greenpeace: Madison County one of worst

By Edward T. Hearn
PRU Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Madison County has one of the worst hazardous pollution records of all 119 counties that border the Mississippi River, according to a study sponsored by the international environmental group Greenpeace.

The study, released Wednesday, named the Metro East county as one of the top offenders in a lengthy statistical analysis on mortality rates and toxic pollution levels in the river counties. The study data was taken mostly from federal records between 1968 and 1983.

Greenpeace, a group known for its confrontational approach in the way it popularizes its causes, hired Public Data Access Inc. of New York to conduct the study.

Madison County was ranked fifth overall for the total amount of toxic pollutants that flowed from it into the river, exceeded only by East Baton Rouge, La.; Hennepin, Minn.; St. Louis city and county; and Ascension, La., the Greenpeace report said.

"Madison County came in fifth in the number of times it ranked among the top three counties on any pollution measure, and third in its top industrial toxics rankings," the study said.

The study's goal was to show a correlation between toxic discharges into the river and a resultant mortality rate increase in counties that border the Mississippi.

During the 15-year study period, the Greenpeace report said, the mortality rate along the Mississippi was higher than the national average by 66,487 deaths. Sixteen percent of that figure were cancer-related and 5

Man shot dead in East St. Louis

EAST ST. LOUIS — A Madison man was shot and killed Tuesday morning in East St. Louis.

The body of Terry Lamont Willis Wright, 28, 71 Grenzer Homes, was found at 5:03 a.m. by police and family members on a practice football field behind East St. Louis High School, 4901 State St. He was pronounced dead at 5:39 a.m. by St. Clair County Deputy Coroner Albert Ransom.

Detective Lenzie Stewart said police received an emergency call about 12:54 a.m. The caller was Ricky Clayton, 30, East St. Louis. Stewart said Clayton related the following:

Clayton and Wright were taken by a man they knew to 740 N. 51st St., where they were met by two other men. They were then taken at gunpoint to the rear of the address and interrogated about a missing firearm.

Clayton broke free and ran, hearing several shots as he fled.

Police found several spent shotgun shells behind the building, which Stewart said seemed to corroborate Clayton's story. Police did not locate Wright's body until 5:03 a.m.

The body was found on the darkened practice field, to where he apparently had run before collapsing, authorities said. He had been wounded in the lower right side of the back with a shotgun and had a laceration on his head, Stewart said.

Meanwhile, police discovered a bench warrant on Clayton, who was taken into custody.

Judge: Asbestos cases may take years

By John D. Milazzo

EDWARDSVILLE — Lawyers, judges, plaintiffs and defendants in Madison County were lining up Tuesday for the opening shots of what is expected to be one of the longest and most involved series of product liability and workmen's welfare cases in the state's history.

The cases deal with 2,176 workmen who claim to have been exposed to asbestos at numerous industrial sites in the county. Defendants are those industries and their suppliers.

The most often named Madison County-based defendants in the cases are Granite City Steel, Laclede Steel Co. in Alton, the Shell Oil Co. refinery in Roxana and the Standard Oil Co. refinery in Wood River.

Plaintiffs' lawyers will attempt to show that workmen were carelessly and improperly exposed to asbestos hazards by suppliers and manufacturers for years after defendants were aware of health problems posed by asbestos.

The substance was for many years used for insulation and fireproofing purposes until it was learned that it was a cause of cancer, asbestosis and other respiratory problems.

To date there have been literally millions of individual pleadings, motions and other documents filed in the cases, according to

Hall: Nameoki would benefit from tax plan

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

NAMEOKI — Nameoki Township could benefit from as many as a dozen new deep wells if the Metro East Sanitary District tax rate question passes in next month's election.

"We are very, very fortunate that this has been a dry year," Trustee Norm Hall told members of the public and the Nameoki Township board at Tuesday night's meeting. "We all know the problems we've had

Turkey shoot may return to village

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

PONTOON BEACH — Turkey shoots in the village may resume, depending on public sentiments expressed at a hearing set for 6 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 18, at the Village Hall.

Shots are fired at target cards during turkey shoots and the noise and parking problems said to be connected with the contests concerned village trustees last fall.

No shoots have been allowed in the village for the past year since a consensus could not be reached among the officials.

A proposal to allow turkey shoots to resume was made by Fred Painter at Tuesday's meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Painter owns and operates Smokey Joe's, 3998 Lake St., where shoots sponsored by the Granite City Elks Lodge (for the Elks' youth activity fund) were held until halted

School talks continue

GRANITE CITY — After several hours of negotiations Tuesday, Granite City Federation of Teachers Local 743 Secretary's Council and District 9 negotiators still did not reach an agreement.

"There are still several things we are trying to iron out," board spokesman Terry Salem said.

A future negotiations date has not yet been scheduled. "They are supposed to get back to me in the next few days," Salem said.

Salem said negotiations with the district's custodians and cooks were scheduled to resume last night.

"Once a tentative agreement is reached with the Local 743 secretaries, a date for a ratification vote on the pending teacher contract can be set.

ROOFTOP RESCUE. Randy Hunt, 31, an employee of Quad City Roofing, was rescued by Granite City firefighters and paramedics Tuesday after suffering a 4,000-volt electrical shock while working atop the Granite City Public Library, 2001 Delmar Ave. Hunt was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center and later transferred to the Burn Unit of St. John's Mercy Medical Center, St. Louis County, where he was in serious condition Wednesday.

Turkey

"Historically, turkey shoots have taken place on my property dating back to at least 1973, benefiting previous owners, the present owners and a number of civic and charitable organizations," Painter said to trustees.

He proposed restricting turkey shoots to Sundays only during the months of October, November and December and only between the hours of noon and 5 p.m.

In earlier discussions, one resident complained about the number of vehicles parked in the immediate vicinity of the tavern during shoots, and a 30-year resident of the 3800 block of Lake Street cited noise, parking problems and debris littering the area.

To deaden excessive noise, Painter said he would set up noise buffers using shrubbery or wooden lattice-type partitions around the shooting area.

A parking lot attendant would be on duty at all times during the shooting hours, he said. "We don't want anyone parking in someone's driveway," he added.

A trained and certified National Rifle Association member would be in charge of the firing line and insurance would be provided to protect the village and all participants from liability, Painter said.

He also offered to pay the village a reasonable fee, if granted permission to hold the shoots. When the issue was debated last year, Painter said, he attended four or five village meetings and also a meeting of the ordinance committee. He reminded the trustees that he had provided an opinion from Attorney William Schooley as to the legality of the shoots.

Speaking for Mayor Glen Wilson, who was absent from the meeting, Trustee Carl Hackney said the mayor suggested handling the issue similarly to a zoning hearing, inviting residents from the surrounding area to voice their opinions.

Police Chief Carl Ballew said, "The only complaint I've had is with the noise."

Trustee Louis Whitsell agreed with the noise factor, saying, "That noise bothers them as far away as (Illinois) 162." Even though they were held in the past, he questioned the wisdom of allowing the shoots, adding, "because we are growing and we have more people."

"We've had them for years and never heard that many complaints," responded Trustee Bob Abel.

"They (turkey shoots) bring a lot of business out here and people like to do it. I do myself," Abel said.

Notices of the hearing were mailed Wednesday to residents living in the vicinity of Smoke Joe's.

Poison

The three worst-hit cities were New Orleans (Orleans Parish) with 19,377 extra deaths, St. Louis city and county with 19,120 deaths and Memphis (Shelby County), Tenn., with 9,251 deaths.

The study also said that the release of toxins into the air and water along the river ranged from 50 percent to 5,400 percent higher than the rest of the nation.

The study said 488 deaths were "excess" in Madison County. In all, 17,395 men and 14,824 women died — "observed deaths" — during the study period.

Of the excess deaths, 464 were males and 24 females, the study said, adding that 46 of the male deaths were cancer-related.

Madison County's lack of significant excess deaths among women and infants, its high level of toxic emissions, and the fact that it had half the national average cancer deaths among the population and had higher than average incomes, all indicate that there may have been a problem with occupational exposures there, the report said.

Nameoki

In flooding in the past, I'll take an ounce of prevention to 10 pounds of cure down the road," he said.

The tax referendum would provide 18.5 percent of the $31 million needed to completely rehabilitate the MESD system as well as install 60 new deep wells and pumping facilities.

"There would be almost 12 of those wells in our immediate area, at least 10 feet deep and with a minimum 8- or 24-inch casing," Hall said.

The cost of the flood protection rehabilitation project is $23 million. Of that figure, only $5,750,000 would not be covered by state or federal funds.

The current rate of 21.68 cents per $100 of valuation would more than double to 47.8 cents but only for five years. At the end of the five-year period, the rate would drop to 31.2 cents per $100.

The owner of a $50,000 home would pay an additional $43.50 for each of the five years and an additional $15.85 each year after that.

"It's not popular to have any kind of tax increase at this time but I would offer strong encouragement to any property owner to consider this," Hall said.

Trustee Joe Garcia requested that the board ask its attorney, Irv. Slate Jr., to write up a resolution on the matter that the board could discuss for approval at a future meeting.

Dance classes set by park district

The Granite City Park District will have a new class in the fall and winter schedule. Beginner Ballroom Dancing for men and women will begin on Wednesday, Oct. 26.

Halloween parade set

GRANITE CITY — Moose Lodge 272 will sponsor the traditional Halloween parade in downtown Granite City on Oct. 31, it was announced this week by Bob Nebeuf, 1988 parade chairman.

It will take place at 7 p.m. Detailed information will be announced soon, Thebeau said.

PSAT-NMSQT test to be given

High school sophomores and juniors are being encouraged to register for the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test of the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT-NMSQT). The test will be given at Granite City high school on Tuesday, Oct. 18, at 7:30 a.m. in the school cafeteria.

Students may register for the test in the high school guidance office before and after school. There is a $5.50 fee payable at registration.

Students in the upper quarter of their class are particularly being urged to take the test. By taking the test, juniors can enter the competition for National Merit Scholarships. They may also participate in the College Board's Student Search Service, which gives students an opportunity to hear from colleges they might not investigate on their own.

The test measures verbal and mathematical aptitude and gives students an opportunity to find out what the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) is like, Sandy Kopy, a guidance counselor, said.

With their score reports, students will receive a copy of "About Your PSAT-NMSQT Scores," a booklet containing information about estimating SAT scores, where to get and how to use detailed information on colleges, and planning for financial aid.

The test is co-sponsored by the College Board and the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

Newsboys syndrome contagious among veteran 'corner keepers'

By Lucyann Boston

It is enough to boggle the mind of a brilliant psychiatrist and stump almost any psychologist worthy of note.

Why would a sane, respectable person willingly and even happily roll out of bed before dawn on a cold, gray morning and stand smiling, even laughing, for hours on a freezing street corner?

To get the motivation behind such behavior, which is particularly prevalent in this metropolitan area during November, we have interviewed three of the longest documented sufferers of what has become known as Old Newsboys Syndrome.

All three began exhibiting signs of this strange behavior back in 1961, just four years after the former editor of the launched its Old Newsboys Day drive for children's charities. And they expect to succumb again this year on Nov. 17, when the Suburban Journals, continuing the Old Newsboys tradition, launches this year's drive with a special edition.

Sanford Goldman of Olivette was struck with the impulse to crawl out of bed before dawn 27 years ago "because I just figure you've got to put something back on this earth and this was a way I could do it."

Goldman sold newspapers first at Delmar and Grand, St. Louis, where his record distribution business was located, and then at Natural Bridge and Salisbury.

When he switched from distributing records to building homes, Goldman missed a couple of Old Newsboys Days.

"Then I built a house for the advertising director of the Globe-Democrat, Ben Magdovitz, and his wife, Sylvia," he said. "I met with them one Old Newsboys Day and Ben had a copy of the paper in his hand. I said, 'I used to do that,' and Sylvia said, 'You should do it again. They need you.'"

That kind of encouragement was all Goldman needed to resume his career as an Old Newsboy, this time at the corner of Olive Street and Delmar. Not only did he begin selling again, but for several years he called Sylvia Magdovitz to report how much he had collected.

Seeing Goldman at his post in Olivette has created an Old Newsboys tradition for many motorists who pass his way.

"I have my regulars who wait for me before they buy their Old Newsboys edition," Goldman said. "Some will buy one from someone else but they always buy a second one from me."

There is a feeling among those who are knowledgeable about Old Newsboys Syndrome that it is contagious.

Taking the case of Paul Homsher of Frontenac, Homsher caught Old Newsboys fever in 1961 from his friend Harold Diehlman, who was then mayor of Creve Coeur and organized a group to sell at Lindbergh Boulevard and Ladue Road.

Homsher later switched to the corner of Ladue and Spoele road, "which was a lot better because there weren't so many trucks going by so fast," and then switched again to the intersection of Clayton and Geyer roads.

When Homsher, an employee of McDonnell Aircraft Co., a division of McDonnell Douglas Corp., had to be in Saudi Arabia during one Old Newsboys Day, his son Jeff volunteered "to keep them going while I was gone," Homsher said.

That one experience was all Homsher needed. He also is an employee of McDonnell Aircraft Co., needed to become infected with the Old Newsboys spirit. On Nov. 17 he will be at Clayton and Geyer roads selling the edition alongside his father, as he has for the past several years.

When the Homshers arrive at the intersection, they will find a gentleman who could be called the dean of that corner, Edward Handlan of Des Peres.

Handlan, a semiretired industrial distributor, said he became a willing victim of Old Newsboys Syndrome 27 years ago because "it looked like a charity where the money was going to the people it was intended for, not to administrative expenses."

"That's why I stayed with it all these years. It's an all-volunteer operation, which costs the charities nothing. In addition, those charities (which all involve children) are so eminently worthy and the money we collect is spread around so many groups." Like others who have sold the Old Newsboys Day edition for a number of years, Handlan has his regular customers and they help make the day worthwhile.

"It's a pretty quiet corner, but I've got a good bunch of friends who always come by every year to get a copy of the paper and our totals have been increasing every year," he said.

To establish your own Old Newsboys tradition, call (314) 821-0211; have in mind at least two corners that would be convenient for their ZIP codes.

Community forms anti-drug council

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The war on drugs has reached a new stage in Granite City, where a newly-formed group, the Caring Community Council, has arrived. Superintendent of Schools Gih Walmesley announced the group's formation and outlined some of its goals.

"This council will provide a unified, coordinated, continuous effort from all segments of our community to help combat this most serious problem," Walmesley said.

The new group has representatives from all segments of society and was formed to promote community awareness of the complexity of the drug problem.

The council also plans to develop a community network to coordinate drug-fighting efforts, provide drug-free activities for teens, form a support group for parents, and encourage and support the drug education curriculum in the schools.

"We don't see the Granite City school district as having a severe drug problem; however, the best way to address any concern is to correct it or change it before it becomes a rooted, serious problem," Jack Haug, coordinator of drug education at Granite City High School, said.

Haug is also the council's chairman.

Benefit dance set for Pam Dymas

EDWARDSVILLE — The Madison County Sheriff's Department will sponsor a benefit dance to aid Pam Dymas, a victim of multiple sclerosis, Friday from 8 p.m. until midnight at the Polish Hall, 826 Greenwood St., Madison. The public is invited.

Live music will be provided by "B Street Express." Band members include Steve Nunn, a detective sergeant on the sheriff's staff, Lt. Pete Bates will serve as master of ceremonies.

Chicken and beer are included in the ticket price of $10 per person, according to Sheriff Bob Churchich. Tickets may be obtained from the sheriff's office or at the door Friday night.

Dymas worked more than 12 years in the processing division of the sheriff's office until being diagnosed as having multiple sclerosis last February. She has been unable to work since that time.

She is the widow of Sam Dymas, who was president of the Madison Board of Education and director of recreation for the City of Madison at the time of his death on Nov. 28, 1983, at age 38.

All proceeds from the event will be contributed to the Pam Dymas Benefit Fund at the Mark Twain Bank, Edwardsville, Churchich said. Members of the sheriff's department are serving as fund trustees.

The money will help to defray extensive medical expenses not covered by insurance, Churchich said.

'Report cards' on school systems awaited by public

Statistics are being compiled on the performance of 350,000 Illinois students in grades 3, 6 and 8 by the State Board of Education.

Results of the testing, which was required under provisions of the 1985 Education Reform Act, will appear for the first time on this year's annual school report cards. Schools are required to make their local report cards available to the public by Oct. 31.

The state's assessment program is designed to measure how well students in grades 3, 6, 8 and 11 are meeting local objectives and state goals for learning in six fundamental areas: language arts, mathematics, biological and physical sciences, fine arts, social sciences and physical development and health.

The assessment program will be fully phased in by the 1992-93 school year, starting with students in grades 3, 6 and 8 and eventually including students in grade 11.

By 1993 and thereafter, all students in the specified grades will be assessed on an annual basis in the six fundamental areas of learning.

Art workshop set for youngsters

The Madison County Arts Council is sponsoring a series of monthly art workshops for children six to nine years old at the Granite City Public Library from October to April.

"The purpose of the workshops is to teach the basic values of art forms to children and to introduce them, under the supervision of a local guest artist, to new materials, new techniques, and new areas of the arts," according to John Peecher, executive director of the Madison County Arts Council.

"Occasionally, the classes will also be just for fun," he said.

The workshops will be held after school, on the second Thursday of the month, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. The Kids & Art Workshops begin Oct. 13 with a class titled "Classic Clowning." The class will be led by Gizmo the Clown.

Other workshops will include "Swedish Christmas Crafts" in December led by Lena Kastel and Kay Kendall and a class in the spring on storytelling, with music led by Jennifer Peters.

Because of the popularity of the classes, the program is being expanded in 1988 to six libraries in Madison County. Classes will be held at the libraries in Bethalto, Collinsville, Edwardsville, Granite City, Highland and Wood River this year.

The fee is $10 per child to join Kids & Art for one season of seven classes. All materials will be furnished. Class size is limited.

Registration forms are available at the Granite City Public Library at 2001 Delmar Ave. To register by phone, persons may call the Arts Council office at 656-8014 or the Children's Department at the library at 452-6368.

The Home Front

By ROD FLOOD

To widen a narrow room, choose a rug with a strong horizontal pattern and place it parallel to the short wall. Arrange furniture perpendicular to the walls to break up the length.

Old draft near a window or door means your flooring expensive heat. Use weatherstripping or rolled cloth to seal the crack.

Window treatment in a recent "show house": a shade of unbleached gauze topped with sheer tulle curtains, halfway down, the pleated curtain was lifted to a tie-back near the rod, to fall in graceful folds.

Squeaking floors can sometimes be temporarily silenced by squirting a little talcum powder into the cracks between the boards. Eventually, the loose boards will have to be properly secured to the joists.

Garden report: 78 percent of households spend time gardening, but fewer are growing their own vegetables, according to the National Gardening Association. Flower bulbs are increasingly popular.

Marquette park officials face theft, misconduct indictments

Two Pere Marquette State Park superintendents, indicted on theft and official misconduct charges by a Jersey County grand jury Sept. 27, are at home with pay, pending a Conservation Department inquiry.

Richard D. Brown, 48, of rural Grafton, supervisor of the entire park grounds and staff at Grafton, surrendered to Jersey County authorities and was released on $10,000 bond.

He is charged with felony theft of over $300 value and official misconduct.

The indictment alleges Brown directed another supervisor to build nine tables for personal use with state materials on state time.

Former head ranger William Trask, 46, of Grafton, also a site superintendent, is charged with theft of under $300 value and official misconduct after allegedly taking 17 sheets of plywood siding.

Trask also posted a $10,000 bond in Jersey County and was released.

Brown and Trask could not be reached for comment.

"We sent both men home with pay until we can investigate," said Jerry Beverlin, Department of Conservation regional land manager at Alton.

"The men are subject to disciplinary action, up to and including dismissal, depending on the results of our own investigation," he said.

"We have to see how serious it is."

Beverlin said he was shocked by the disclosure because he has had no complaints about the park.

"No complaints ever came to my office. We knew of the investigation, but we had no knowledge of any problems," he said.

Brown, a 14-year DOC veteran and a site superintendent since March 1979, earns $2,457 a month at Grafton. Trask, also a 14-year employee promoted to site superintendent in June, earns $2,235 a month.

The investigation began after state police alerted DOC on May 5 about allegations of theft and official misconduct, said Charles Tammanga of DOC in Springfield.

"We said, 'Let's check it out,' and our people have been cooperating with state police and have provided them auditor's records and other materials," he said.

Tammanga did not know if the allegations came from inside or outside the department, and he could not elaborate on the tables or what they may have been used for.

"We will do an investigation of our own to see what other violations or what other problems there may be," said Beverlin, who could not recall a similar problem at the park.

The public may experience a "minor inconvenience," but the department will reassign people to cover those positions, he said.

Victim: 'He never even flinched'

By Gary King

It was a quiet night, near closing time, at the Caseyville Shell station on Oct. 4 when a man parked his late-model Audi near the front door.

The man approached the counter and asked the two station attendants, Jim Hamm and Bob Cofrons, for directions to Carbondale.

Hamm, who had only worked at the station about seven hours, was preparing to draw water for mopping when the customer arrived about 9 p.m., just an hour before the station would close for the night.

Naturally, Hamm wanted to make a good impression in his first day on the job. Hamm's boss, Don Paulk, had told the 30-year-old native of Havana, Ill., that he was on a trial run, that he'd have Hamm a couple of days and then "see what happened."

Hamm and Cofrons gave the customer, Hamm addressed the man politely as "sir."

The medium-built, well-dressed, thirtyish customer asked if he could use the station's restroom, and was told he could.

As Hamm proceeded to draw the mop water, he heard two loud pops and turned around.

Cofrons was on the ground, moaning. Hamm was suddenly staring down the barrel of a pistol.

More loud pops, and James Hamm lay on the floor in a pool of blood with five bullet holes in his body.

The customer-turned-robber, the man Hamm had called "sir," walked back across the station's garage toward Cofrons, who was moaning and calling out to his fellow worker. Another shot was fired, quieting Cofrons.

Within a minute, the Audi was roaring out of the parking lot. The only sound inside the station was the mop water spilling into the sink.

It's 3 p.m. on a Friday afternoon, and Jim Hamm is sitting in the living room of his mobile home in O'Fallon, Ill. He had been released from Belleville Memorial Hospital two hours earlier, less than four days after the attempted robbery that almost took his life.

Hamm points to the five bullet wounds, the scars that are already beginning to heal. He knows the mental scars won't disappear that quickly.

"I still get that guy, I still see that guy, and that gun, looking right at my side."

"I just remember feeling so helpless, having no defense at all. I was pretty much at his mercy. I was up against the wall and had nowhere to hide. It was like an execution, like the kind you see on TV."

Looking back, Hamm said the whole event caught him unsuspecting, like an ice ball to his blind side.

"The guy pulled up in a nice car, he was well-groomed, he was dressed nice, he had no scars, no earrings, no mustache, just an average-looking guy. If he'd looked like a hoodlum, I might've looked at him closer."

"But this guy just looked like someone you could never imagine doing that type of thing. I called him 'sir,' he looked like a nice guy," Hamm said.

"But I'll never forget him turning and pointing that gun at me. We looked each other right in the eye, and he had no expression whatsoever on his face."

He didn't laugh or smile. He never even flinched. It was like shooting people was just something he did every day.

"Just couldn't believe it. I thought 'This just can't be real.' I thought that was it for me, but I wasn't scared really. I didn't have time to be scared. He shot me, and I fell to the ground."

"All I knew to do was play dead. I was in pain — there's no feeling in the world like a gunshot."

"But I just wanted him to leave me alone. I watched a National Geographic show on TV a few weeks ago that said the best way to get away from a grizzly bear is to play dead.

"I guess I thought about that after police arrived. He worked. I don't think he gave me a second thought."

After police arrived, Hamm accompanied them to the cash register. That, too, was a sight he will not soon forget.

"When I opened the cash register, I couldn't believe my eyes. All the money was in place, nothing had even been moved," Hamm said.

"All the guy had to do was push one button, and he could've cleaned us out."

"He could've even made it easier than that. If he'd have come in and held us up, we would've gladly filled up his trunk for him and sent him his way. But I really think he just wanted to hurt somebody."

Hamm said he doesn't know what his future holds. He's just glad he has one.

"Everybody keeps saying I was in the wrong place at the right time," Hamm said.

"I like to think I was in the right place at the wrong time. If I would've been standing differently, if I hadn't been turned sideways, he might've been able to kill me."

"Everybody keeps telling me that I'm only alive because the guy was a bad shot, but I think there was something greater than any of us in that gas station that night."

"I've always believed in God, but now I don't have any doubts."

Hamm was asked if there would be a second day on the job for him at Caseyville Shell. He laughed and shook his head.

"My boss said I had a job if I wanted one," Hamm said. "But I just don't know if I could go back and stare into that garage again."

THE LAW AND YOU

Parents and teachers frequently ask whether teachers can use corporal punishment in a given situation. In addition, educators have asked the Courts to determine what constitutes excessive corporal punishment. In one recent case in Illinois, the Court decided whether punitive damages should be allowed in a case where a teacher uses excessive corporal punishment.

The laws of the State of Illinois expressly give teachers authority to maintain discipline in the classroom for the safety and supervision of the students. In 1974, the Illinois Supreme Court decided that a teacher's right to discipline students will be held to the same test of reasonableness which is applied to parents in disciplining their own children. If a student does bring a Court action against a teacher for administering corporal punishment, the burden is on the student to prove willful and wanton misconduct on the part of the educator. Willful and wanton misconduct has been defined by the court as a reckless disregard for the safety of others.

If a teacher does administer excessive corporal punishment, the next logical question is whether the student can recover punitive damages in addition to compensatory damages.

If the student were only allowed to recover compensatory damages, this would compensate the injured party for the injury sustained, and nothing more. If punitive damages were denied in a case such as this, it would lessen the potential recovery by the student.

In a recent case, an elementary student, by his mother, filed suit against a teacher who allegedly administered excessive corporal punishment. The student filed suit against the teacher, the principal, the elementary school, and the Board of Education of the school district. In this case, the student asked for punitive damages as well as compensatory damages. The Trial Court threw out the Plaintiff's claim for punitive damages, and the case was taken up on appeal.

In deciding whether punitive damages would be allowed, the Appellate Court noted that it was generally recognized that punitive damages were awarded to punish an offender and to deter other similar misconduct. The Appellate Court felt that punitive damages should be allowed in a case such as this. The Court felt that given the important role of education in our society, it was not desirable to make potential liability for punitive damages a major concern in a teacher's mind when he is called upon to maintain discipline in the classroom.

Madison police

Home burglarized twice

Cynthia Allen, 1539 Market St., returned home Oct. 4 and found the front door standing open and a 19-inch color television missing.

On Oct. 1, Allen also reported her home was burglarized and several items were stolen, including a porcelain jewelry box containing two chains, a small cross and earrings, all 14K gold, a large boom box radio with a dual tape deck and detachable speakers, an AM-FM digital clock radio, stone-washed jeans and three new clothing items, a silk blouse valued at $32, a jean jacket worth $64 and a blue and silver dress valued at $23.

Three warrants served

Responding to a disturbance call at 115 Grenzer Homes, an officer saw Larry Donell Wimberly, 28, of that address and arrested him on two Madison warrants — alleging misdemeanor theft and failure to appear on a charge of battery — and a Venice warrant alleging failure to appear on a charge of criminal damage to property.

Condemned house looted

Mary Hornett, 1101 McCambridge Ave., who also owns a condemned house at 1023 Grand Ave., reported Oct. 1 the latter dwelling was looted of several items.

A large piece of plywood boarding up the rear door had been pushed in to gain entry, she said. Missing were a 22-inch color television, checkbooks, assorted dishes and a large trunk containing clothing and other items.

On Oct. 3, Hornett said, the Grand Avenue house again had been entered, but nothing appeared to be missing.

Man attempts robbery

Jessie Watt, 208 Abbott St., Venice, told police Oct. 2 that a man demanded $20 from him and then tried to take the money from his pocket.

Watt said he was seated in a car behind 128 Garesche Homes when the man walked up and asked Watt to move his vehicle forward so he could get another car down the alley.

The man then got into the front seat with Watt and demanded $20. After he was refused the money, the man stuck his hand in Watt's pocket and then fled on foot toward the Grenzer Homes housing project.

Illinois 203 mishap results in four charges

Robert Todd McKinney, 20, St. Louis, was ticketed on four traffic charges and was served a warrant following an accident on Illinois 203 on Sept. 30.

McKinney was driving a tractor-trailer owned by McKinney Hauling, St. Louis. The truck turned over and spilled a load of broken bricks on the highway as the vehicle was turning west from the northbound lanes of Illinois 203 onto Eagle Park Road.

Both McKinney and a passenger in the truck, James Hardy, 28, East St. Louis, sustained injuries and were taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

The Illinois Department of Transportation sent a dump truck and a backhoe to remove the material scattered from the truck, and Illinois State Police inspected the truck for defects.

McKinney was charged with operating a vehicle with a foreign license during a license suspension, spilling a load on a highway, using no warning devices when disabled, and failing to reduce speed when turning left. He also served a Collinsville warrant, alleging failure to appear on a charge of driving while his license was suspended.

McKinney was released to Collinsville police and was told to appear Nov. 4 in the Granite City court on the Madison charges.

Goo-ood morning Vietnam!

Movie-model deejay discusses movie, real life

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

The following exchange typifies the sort of reaction Adrian Cronauer often gets from people he has just met:

"Guess who I just interviewed," this reporter told an acquaintance. "I'll give you a hint. Goo-ood morning, Vietnam!"

"Robin Williams?!" she said excitedly.

"Uh-uh, Adrian Cronauer."

"Oh," she said, with noticeably less enthusiasm.

Cronauer is the real-life counterpart to Williams' character in the hit movie about life on an armed forces radio station during the Vietnam War. (Of course, back in the mid-'60s, when Cronauer, now 50, was "Nam, they were still calling it a 'police action.'")

Cronauer will be at Gateway International Raceway on Illinois 203 south of Madison on Saturday for Tribute 88, a day-long festival of music and remembrance about Vietnam. We talked with him by phone from Philadelphia, where he was picking up some items left behind during his and his wife's recent relocation to Arlington, Va. The Cronauers have three children, all grown and gone.

Cronauer said he is not a whole lot like manic actor Robin Williams. Few are — in this galaxy, anyway.

"I imagine some people probably are disappointed when they meet me," he said. "It's only natural."

Cronauer is a conversational conservative compared to

Williams. He has one of those resonant radio voices all right, but it's more like Bob Hardy's than Wolfman Jack's. His answers to questions are quiet and concise, with few digressions or rhetorical flourishes.

Cronauer left Vietnam in April 1966, having spent a year with

Armed Forces Radio Saigon (AFRS). The intervening years have been spent in radio, TV and advertising. He enrolled two years ago in the University of Pennsylvania Law School, intending to pursue a new career in communications law.

Then the movie hit, and hit big. He has taken a sabbatical for a while to mine gold on the lecture circuit.

One of his major lecture themes is the difference between the movie and his actual experience. He has it down to a tight monologue.

"The movie was never intended to be a biography. The best way to put it is (Williams) was playing a fictional character named Adrian Cronauer, who is a disc jockey in Vietnam."

"If I had to pick a figure out of the air, I would say it is about 45 percent factual and 55 percent Hollywood imagination and exaggeration.

"Yes, I did come from Greece where I was on Armed Forces Radio."

"Yes, I did teach English (to Vietnamese nationals)."

"Yes, I did have a problem with news censorship.

"Yes, I was in a restaurant shortly before they (the Viet Cong) blew it up."

"Yes, I did start each program by going, 'Goo-ood morning, Vietnam.'"

"No, I was not ordered to Vietnam by a general who heard me on the air."

"No, I did not teach my English class how to swear in street slang."

"Nobody forced me to play polkas and Lawrence Welk music, and no, I was not the first person to play rock-'n-roll. We had played it all along. My contribution was trying to make it sound more like a state-side radio station."

"No, I did not get thrown out of Vietnam."

"Yes, I did go out in the field to do interviews, but, no, I did not get hit by a land mine and wander around lost in the jungle trying to avoid the Viet Cong. And I did not have a sergeant major trying to kill me."

"And, no, a qualified no, because you can never tell — to the best of my knowledge, none of my (Vietnamese) friends were Viet Cong. But you didn't go up to somebody in Saigon and say, 'Hey, you can tell me, are you really Viet Cong, huh?'"

Back in 1979, Cronauer had helped work up a pilot for a TV sitcom about his stint on the air in Saigon. "MASH" was the number one show then and "WKRP in Cincinnati" was hot, too.

"It made sense to put the two together and do something about Armed Forces Radio," Cronauer said.

Unfortunately, Tinseltown types looked at you strangely if you combined the words humor and Vietnam. So, nothing happened for a few years until Robin Williams' agent got wind of it.

"The rest, as they say, is history," said Cronauer.

Cronauer said he had a hand in writing the script, but he didn't meet Williams until the premiere. Did it feel strange watching somebody portraying him?

"It did for the first five minutes. That was a little schizoid. But after that, it calmed down. As I said, it was never intended to be a biography."

Still, he said he gets a kick out of running into Viet vets who remember him: "They will sometimes say 'thanks for helping me get through Vietnam.' That's a good feeling."

One of the things he makes a point of mentioning in his speeches to business groups and college students is what Vietnam vets "are really like."

They are not a homogenous group, he said. They are as varied and multifaceted as any other segment of the population."

Nor are most vets running around with post-traumatic stress disorder, like power kegs waiting for a spark to set them off, Cronauer said.

Dan Quayle's Vietnam era service has cooled somewhat as a topic of debate, but it seemed natural to ask Cronauer for his views on it. For the first time in the interview, Cronauer became somewhat forceful:

"Dan Quayle did not go running off to Canada. He's not a draft dodger. He didn't claim conscientious objector status. He chose a different form of service just like I did."

"I went into the Air Force to avoid being drafted. Does that make me a draft dodger? Technically, it does."

"There were a lot of National Guard units that were called up and sent to Vietnam. He had no ironclad guarantee he wouldn't go to Vietnam."

"I would be the last person in the world to ever tell a National Guardsman or an Army Reservist that he's some kind of second-class citizen. No way."

"A lot of the people who have been picking at Quayle — where were they? They were out there protesting the war, spitting on the veterans that came back, and running off to Canada."

"Now they have the nerve to complain about Quayle because he was in the reserves rather than the regular army. Big deal."

At 1 p.m., during a POW/MIA rally, veterans will release 2,404 balloons to honor

Other attractions include skidlers, memorabilia booths, and information on veterans' issues and Agent Orange, the

Two vacations will be given away, Roush said: A Carnival

ROBIN WILLIAMS as Air Force Sgt. Adrian Cronauer, the real-life model for his role in "Good Morning, Vietnam."

Movie overstated DJ's comedy, says movie's model

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

"Dawn Buster" was the name of Air Force Sgt. Adrian Cronauer's 6-to-10 a.m. show. When he would open with his usual "Goo-ood morning, Vietnam!" the men in the field would scream back unprintable variations of "Get stuffed, Cronauer!"

Disc jockeys who followed Cronauer in the time slot kept his trademark sign-on including "Wheel of Fortune's" Pat

Sajak (Good morning, Vanna?).

Those real reactions were a far cry from the scenes in the movie that show soldiers rocking out in the jungle to Williams-as-Cronauer's mix of music and mania. Ranting about the sweltering heat, Williams shouts:

"It's so hot here, I saw one of those little guys in the orange robes burst into flames."

"Cronauer had a more dry sense of humor," said Cronauer's fellow military deejay

Ben Moses, who met Cronauer in Saigon in 1965 and later co-produced the film.

"We would try hard to do real funny stuff, but it was not hilarious, ha-ha funny."

"I'm not nearly as funny as Robin," said Cronauer, who didn't meet Williams until the movie's premiere.

"I was basically a disc jockey," he is basically a comedian. I think I was a lot better disc jockey than he is, but he's a heck of a lot better comedian than I am."

Although Pope John Paul II released a major paper last week reiterating the Catholic Church's stand against ordaining women, some women already leading ministries aren't buying the rationale.

The Catholic Archdiocese of St. Louis cites tradition and Scripture as the reasons for the policy. But some Protestant churches with essentially the same Scripture and tradition have found ways around the controversial issue.

"It's a power play," Sister Toni Tompkins, a campus minister at Florissant Valley Community College, said of the church's refusal to allow women to function as priests.

"It falls into the same category as women receiving 65 percent of a man's wage for the same job."

Temporally said part of the reason women can't be ordained as Catholic priests stems from the church's view of women as temptresses.

"Men go back to Eve and see women as trouble," she said.

The Rev. Patricia Handloss-Stern, rector of St. Augustine's Episcopal Church in Richmond

Heights, said the sexual dimension is definitely a problem.

"People see women as sexual objects. Their ordination raises all sorts of issues."

Stern was ordained 11 years ago. "I was one of the first,"

she said. "Ordination of women is still new to our church."

But the Episcopal Church considers spiritual understanding as well as history, tradition and the Bible when making policy decisions, Stern said.

"Ultimately it was the importance of experience that prompted the ordaining of women,"

Stern said. "Why can't God call women to the ministry? How can we determine it isn't meant to be if we don't try it?"

Stern said relying on biblical interpretation for policy change is difficult.

"There are so many ways to interpret Scripture. And historically the Scriptures have been given a male flavor."

Lost In This Space

By Andy Siering

For better, for worse, or for money?

Money, according to the cliché, can't buy you love.

Of course, one school of thought says what money can't buy ain't worth having. At least it can buy some pretty luxurious misery.

When love has flown away, money helps cushion the blow.

That's what the divorce lawyers say, anyway.

It's hard to say just how much money Robin Givens, star of the TV sitcom "Head of the Class," will get, if any, from divorcing heavyweight champion Mike Tyson.

Givens, 24, filed for divorce last Friday after nine months of a marriage masquerading as a soap opera. Her lawyer, Raoul Felder (how's that for a trustworthy name?), claims that Givens and her mother, Ruth Roper, have yet to mention money in some 30 conversations he has had with them.

Yet Givens reportedly tried to cash two checks totaling $651,000 over the weekend — a move managed to block. Maybe she just wanted to go shopping. I don't know.

This story has everything a soap opera needs: Famous people, a national TV (Sept. 30 on "20/20" with interviewer "Baba Gawronski"), greed, sex and violence. Even an interfering mother-in-law.

At a not-so-tender 21, Tyson has already earned untold millions persuading people to fall asleep — with his fists. If the fight takes place in California, where divorce law is a leading industry, Givens might make off with as much as half of Tyson's earnings during the short marriage.

Those earnings represent the bulk of young Tyson's lifetime earnings because they were by far his biggest paydays. If memory serves, he got more than $20 million for the Spinks fight alone.

Excuse me, but I don't think this is quite equitable. Did Givens get in the ring with Michael Spinks or Tony Tubbs? Did she coach him on how to throw a boxer?

Or is she trying to collect sparring partner fees? On "20/20" Givens claimed that Tyson had swung at her.

I don't find this very credible. If he swung at her, he must have missed. I don't find that very credible either, unless he was trying to miss. Ask Spinks about Tyson's accuracy.

If Tyson had connected, she could file in two states — New Jersey with her body and California with her head.

The champ has public opinion on his side, says USA TODAY. A call-in poll conducted by "USA TODAY: The Television Show," the results of which were quoted in the paper of the same name, logged 29,633 callers who thought Givens shouldn't get the time of day much money. Only 1,174 said she deserved any cash.

At least people apparently take the view of Tyson's friends: Givens and mom are villainesses preying on an innocent. He says the pair made him take tranquilizers before the "20/20" interview to ensure he would not dispute their claims about his body and mother's instability.

Givens called life with Spinks "pure hell."

That may well be. Certainly, Tyson hasn't exactly shown the judgment of a Supreme Court justice. He has had some problems here and elsewhere. From all accounts, his problems go beyond those described in the title of another sitcom, "Growing Pains." It is claimed he is a manic-depressive, subject to extreme emotional swings.

But why can't she just get out of a bad thing? Surely she doesn't need Tyson's money. As an actress and model, she annually must make well into six figures.

In my view, Tyson's lawyer, Howard Weisman, has stated the facts of the matter definitively:

This wasn't a lady who gave up a career to support a husband. As a matter of fact, her influence has been negative. You need read about Mike Tyson conducting himself in a negative manner until these people

The better way to sell your home.

This letter is to thank you for your business this past year and also to notify you of our "Fall furnace start up special".

With the long cold winter nights just around the corner it is time to get the furnace cleaned and checked so as to help prevent costly breakdowns as well as obtain maximum operating efficiency of your system. Our ten part start up special includes:

1. Clean burners, flues and duct accumulation on burners can cause incomplete burning of gas and increase your fuel bill.
2. Check flue or chimney for draft. Squirrels, birds and soot can clog a flue almost overnight.
3. Check heat exchanger. This is the heart of the furnace and should be inspected annually.
4. Blower motor and fan. Oiling and cleaning can add years of life to these components.
5. Thermostat. Heat anticipator settings have as much to do with comfort inside your home as proper clothing does outside.
6. Fan and limit control. Fan should cycle on and off without wasting fuel. The limit is your protection against overheating.
7. Gas valves and pilot assembly. A clean assembly will help keep your pilot burning and save you money.
8. Check filters. If you need extra filters call us with size and we will bring them with us when you schedule your cleaning.
9. Power supply. Check fuse or circuit breaker for proper size. Check general condition of wiring connections.
10. Gas piping at furnace. Check for leaks or deterioration of pipe and fittings.

Hebrews 13:8 "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and forever."

God is the same. For eternity He is the same. He does not change. His Word does not change. His promises do not change. His power, His ability, and His Love, do not change.

What an encouragement comes to us by knowing that God still is in the position of answering prayer. That He is the same to all who call on Him. That whosoever cometh unto Him, He will in no wise cast out. That no man can pluck you out of His hand. That whosoever you ask in Jesus' name, you can receive.

How easy it is to believe in His power yesterday or tomorrow. But if you need Him, you need Him today. He is always the same. Believe. Today.

Trial

Madison County Circuit Judge Charles W. "Bill" Chapman, who has coordinated the court processes setting the stage for the trials.

It could take decades to resolve all the cases, he said. It would be conceivable, under the poorest of circumstances, for the cases to take as long as 100 years for all to be heard, Chapman said.

But, of the 2,176 asbestos cases, Chapman said he believes it is unlikely that all will come to trial.

Additionally, court officials are placing significant resources behind efforts to clear the cases as expeditiously as possible, Chapman said Monday.

During a break in hearing motions on the cases, some of which involve as many as 40 attorneys, Chapman spoke about the situation.

Indicating several grocery carts and dollies loaded with boxes bulging with documents, he said, "Those are not things but filings and motions strictly pertaining to punitive damages."

Chapman said those papers barely scratch the surface of the documentation that has been filed, beginning with the first 40 cases filed in mid-1986.

The county, in leased space outside the courthouse, has created a special, separate depository for the papers pertaining to the cases. "These are 50,000 documents and that 1.5 million microfilm individual documents on file" in the depository, Chapman said.

August, clerks in the office were producing an average of 77,000 photocopies of the documents per week for lawyers involved in the litigation.

Jury selection began Tuesday for the first of three 10-case dockets that have been set. Circuit Judge Paul E. Riley will preside over those cases, which will be heard individually, Chapman said.

DEPRESSION MAY BE MORE COMMON THAN YOU THINK

As families gather together during the upcoming holiday season, there will be family members for whom the festivities will seem hollow and flat, devoid of the good cheer affecting those around them. These are the unfortunate people who suffer from depression, the most common mental illness in the world.

Depression is so prevalent, it is often called the "common cold" of the mental disorders.

Depression accounts for 75 percent of all psychiatric hospitalizations and at any given time may affect 15 percent of the adult population in America. The National Institute of Mental Health estimates that at least one half of our adult population has suffered from depression at one time or another.

Depression strikes people of all ages and in all stations of life. President Abraham Lincoln suffered from such severe depression that he would not carry a gun for fear that he would commit suicide. Winston Churchill was so familiar with bouts of depression that he called it his "black dog."

Depression is not to be confused with the ordinary transient moods of sadness or unhappiness that we all feel from time to time. The core symptom of clinical depression is an intensified and persistent version of sadness and a nagging, unreasonable, undefined fear.

Other symptoms are insomnia, highlighted by consistent awakening in the middle of the night and being unable to return to sleep because of your mind continuously going over seemingly insignificant problems; a feeling of hopelessness and worthlessness; feelings of guilt associated with things over which you have no control.

If you feel that you may be suffering from depression, what can you do about it? Psychiatrists advise that you "do something," anything, even if it is the most simple of tasks. The feeling of accomplishment of completing even the most simple task seems to help ease the feelings of depression.

What can you do to help a family member who you suspect may be suffering from depression? Psychiatrists urge that you develop a line of communications with that person so that he or she can talk intimately with you about his or her fears and wishes. In addition to establishing a line of communication, you should attempt to keep that person active and busy. Depression leads to inactivity, which in turn feeds the depression and makes it deeper.

World War II vet attends reunion in Florida

George and Pearl Riti have returned from Orlando, Fla., where they attended the fourth reunion of the crew members of a World War II Navy ship, the U.S.S. Kimberly.

Although this was the fourth reunion, it was the first time for the Ritis to attend. Curt Forster, the reunion's organizer, had been unable to locate the family for earlier reunions.

Forty-nine of the former shipmates attended the get-together at the Crowne Plaza Holiday Inn in Orlando. Some had not seen each other in 43 years.

The ship's captain, Harry Smith, 83, now a retired rear admiral, was in attendance.

made caramel apples. They also watched movies and played computer games.

Scouts attending were: Christi Castle, Mindy Colbert, Theresa Dames, Jamie Dummitt, Valerie Matlock, Stacy San Soucie, Amy Schilling and Jill Wozniak.

Smoky Mountains.

The McKinnons met their daughter, Peggy McKinnon, at the airport in Knoxville, Tenn. Peggy was on a three-day vacation from her job with Piedmont Airlines. She joined the group on their trip through the Smokies.

The group toured Dollywood at Pigeon Forge, Clingman's Dome, a Cherokee Indian reservation and craft shops.

The group also enjoyed the trolley rides around Gatlinburg and the other Gatlinburg ski slopes, a tram-ride to the top of Harrison Mountain and a trip to Cades Cove.

They also visited an old cemetery where some of the graves are marked with oddly shaped stones.

On Sept. 17, Mrs. Shiev was honored with a birthday party given by the rest of the group.

The McKinnons returned Peggy to the airport for the return flight back to her home base at Charlotte, N.C.

The Schiebs visited a friend, Elizabeth Lawson, who lives high on a mountain in Gatlinburg.

NRA stands on constitutional rights

To the editor:

I am in the NRA (National Rifle Association) and I take offense at Pat Martin's column in the Sept. 25 Press-Record/Journal.

Our congressmen voted against this latest attempt at handgun control because the people they represent wanted it that way.

Mr. Martin is like most others in the media pushing gun control. He ignores the facts and calls names to cover up the truth.

If a majority of Americans favor stricter controls, if not an outright ban, on handguns then why was this bill not widely publicized by the press? So the so-called majority of Americans could tell their congressmen to vote for it?

The truth is a small group of congressmen wanted to sneak it through with a bill on tougher drug laws. These congressmen have their own pressure group, Handgun Control International, that pulls their strings.

The truth is, Mr. Martin, that the NRA does stand on the sanctity of the Constitution and the right to bear arms. The NRA and its millions of members will continue to work for our right to bear arms regardless of media attempts to tell only their side of the story.

I for one am glad to see that our elected officials do listen to us and vote accordingly.

Sexually transmitted diseases grow as people focus on AIDS

By Prof. F. Henry Firsching
School of Sciences, SIUE

Sexually transmitted diseases have been with mankind for centuries. At the moment, the focus is on AIDS because of its lethal nature. Anyone getting AIDS will die.

But in the process of focusing attention on AIDS many of the other sexually transmitted diseases have been de-emphasized. The result is that these sexually transmitted diseases cause lesions and sores in the reproductive region, thus increasing the chances of AIDS to be transmitted.

There are more than 13 million new cases of sexually transmitted diseases each year in the United States. This is an enormous problem. About one out of every 15 adults gets a sexually transmitted disease each year.

About 34,000 new cases of syphilis were reported last year. Syphilis is a severe disease that can cause mental deterioration and death. About 800,000 cases of gonorrhea were reported, with a similar number unreported. Gonorrhea is less severe than syphilis, but it can lead to infertility in women.

Chlamydia is the most common sexually transmitted disease, with about 4 million cases each year. Chlamydia is credited with about 20 percent of the infertility in women in the United States.

Genital herpes is rampant. About 20 percent of the sexually active men and women are infected with genital herpes. Then there is genital warts, with more than a million cases each year.

All of these sexually transmitted diseases interfere with normal health and do bring about the additional difficulty that AIDS can be transmitted by way of the sores and lesions produced by the milder diseases. The expectation that the fear of AIDS would slow down the transmission of other sexually transmitted diseases has not been realized. The reverse seems to have happened. The milder sexually transmitted diseases have tended to promote the spread of AIDS.

Medical specialists are now refocusing on the entire spectrum of sexually transmitted diseases. All of them should be controlled. Controlling these milder diseases should, in the long run, help to control the AIDS epidemic as well.

Despite fierce competition, NRA letter runaway winner for most irresponsible

To the editor:

The runaway winner for the most irresponsible letter on a legislative matter so far this year — and the competition is fierce — is the National Rifle Association.

And the NRA won, even though it furnished its reputation with members of Congress for the campaign it conducted.

Sarah Brady, wife of presidential Press Secretary Jim Brady, has been promoting legislation to require a seven-day waiting period for someone buying a handgun so that police could check out whether that individual is a convicted felon or has a history of mental problems.

That's all the bill does. Police organizations around the nation strongly favor it.

The man who runs my Springfield office, Joe Bob-Pierce, has a gun collection. He's a member of the Electrical Workers union, a former Baptist minister and a Mason.

Joe is a good all-around person who happens to enjoy collecting guns. I asked Joe if there was anything wrong with this legislation and he assured me there was no reason for any hunter or gun collector or anyone who is going to use a gun responsibly to oppose it.

But look at the arguments put out by the National Rifle Association:

NRA: The bill would cost "billions of your tax dollars."

The Congressional Budget office says the bill would cost the federal government nothing.

NRA: It would "impose backdoor registration on American gun owners."

Not true. The bill requires records be destroyed within 30 days.

NRA: It would be the "first step in banning all guns in America."

I don't know of a single senator or House member who favors that.

The final sentence of the inflammatory letter: "Don't let the U.S. Congress impose total gun control on America."

After reading this misleading letter, a great many gun owners around the nation understandably wrote to stop the Brady bill.

Unfortunately, the NRA frightened enough members of Congress so that the suggestion for a one-week delay in purchasing handguns was defeated in the House, 223 to 182.

It was a victory for irresponsibility.

This measure would not have stopped all crime. But it would have helped a little. Over and over we have instances — like the shooting of Jim Brady and Ronald Reagan — where a handgun is purchased to kill or maim but a waiting period would have given law enforcement authorities time to check out the buyer.

In John Hinckley's case, law enforcement officials believe the background check would have revealed a previous criminal offense and stopped the gun sale.

My friends at the NRA who once supported a waiting period would be wise to remember this fact about the law in any field: Change will come. If reasonable change is resisted, then unreasonable changes may occur.

The police organizations are right.

Sarah Brady is right. The National Rifle Association is wrong.

Unfortunately, in too many instances, dead wrong.
U.S. SEN. PAUL SIMON

Quayle using Reagan's evasion tactics

To the editor:

Reaganism, in the political sense, is on trial in the Quayle controversy.

When George Bush flippanently joked about not wanting to disclose that he flunked chemistry in high school at the National State Fair, he used a classic Reagan political technique.

When Dan Quayle, his youthful eyes glimmering, looked straight into the camera and merely answered that when his student deferment ended, he was "interested" in joining the National Guard, he was doing what President Reagan taught him. He simply ignored away the common understanding of all who lived through the Vietnam War that the National Guard was itself a Vietnam dodge.

Quayle's hypocrisy may decide whether the masterful Reagan political technique of joking and smiling while ignoring the facts will live on.

President Reagan got away with these quips and facetious statements because he was a master at being the nice guy that everybody liked. Red, white and blue balloons were going up even though the ship was pretty down. The picture was pretty even though the words made no sense.

Someone has said that Reagan's presidency is like Alice in Wonderland. I think it is more like taking your family to Disneyland. A minority of parents hate to take their kids to Disneyland because it is frantic, expensive and gives them a headache. Most agree with their children that it is the time of their lives and great fun. So great that when you leave, it is hard to adjust back to reality.

The Quayle issue is going to tell us whether we are going to stay longer at Reaganland to enjoy the fun or whether we are ready to walk out that gate and really face the reality of the future.

'Yes' on BAC redistricting

Since the Press-Record/Journal encouraged adoption of the Belleville Area College redistricting law, it will come as no surprise that we favor a "Yes" vote on that topic in the Nov. 8 election.

But the issue is important to the entire BAC district, not just Granite City and various other cities, townships and counties that are without representation.

There are 39 Illinois institutions of higher learning officially designated as community colleges.

That state limit, 39, requires a typical district to include a large geographic area; BAC has 2,100 square miles in eight counties. But nevertheless the original objective remains: two-year colleges that are closely linked to their communities' needs.

With all seven trustees elected at large, the BAC district's focus has changed over the years, gradually and then drastically. The image of quality instruction achieved conveniently and at reasonable cost has not been entirely lost, but it has become blurred.

Some of the current trustees who say they are for balanced budgets have made that commendable goal difficult — by forcing unwarranted costs into the budget and then blocking the corresponding revenue. That kind of logic surely cannot fool all the people all the time, but it has worked in the past several years, politically at least.

It makes no sense for board members to give total allegiance to the Belleville campus and resent every penny spent at Granite City or Red Bud, particularly since some of those pennies are used for student recruitment, greatly bolstering the college's income. As we have said before, the important thing in a college district ought to be educating students, not finding excuses to hamper education.

A board truly representing the entire district is not only necessary for fairness — a big portion of BAC's taxes, after all, is derived from the Granite City area — but also because of the need for balanced, impartial policies.

Nothing short of that is good enough. It is simply unacceptable to assume that all wisdom resides in St. Clair County, even if that is where the present board lives. The district badly needs a few non-St. Clair viewpoints.

Voters surely will say just that with their "Yes" votes Nov. 8, unless they are snowed under by what led to the unfairness in the first place, bloc voting in Belleville.

Issue affects home owners

Guest comment by the Granite City Board of Realtors, whose president is Rodney C. Flood:

To all area home owners, of all the issues to be decided on Nov. 8, the Metro East Sanitary District tax rate question is the most vital to you.

A "Yes" vote on that issue could save you hundreds or even thousands of dollars in the value of your greatest possession — your home.

True, the MESD question is a tax increase issue, but it is a very small one. On a $45,000 home, for example, the impact on your tax bill will be only about $40 — or about 75 cents per week.

But on the positive side, approving the question will add to your property value by diminishing buyer fear of water damage. And it could keep you from losing most of the value of your property. Here's why.

It is clear that, if the flood protection system we have depended upon for the last 80 years is not repaired, our region will be federally declared as an "unprotected flood plain."

In that event, you will not be able to sell your home for anything close to its true value.

There will be no flood insurance. And no lender will approve a mortgage loan without it. You would lose your equity, which represents an emergency resource, a nest-egg for retirement or an asset you may hope to pass along to your children.

We must address the water problems of our region, and the issue to be decided Nov. 8 will protect us from flooding and reduce our annual groundwater woes — mostly at federal expense.

If we have to do it on our own later, it will cost us all many times more than a mere 75 cents per week.

As real estate professionals, we feel a responsibility which goes beyond simply serving you when you are buying or selling a home. We believe we should help you protect your investment.

That is why we strongly urge you to go to the polls on Nov. 8 and vote "Yes" for the Metro East Sanitary District tax rate question.

Arts services being expanded

The Madison County Arts Council's decision to further expand its varied programs is a sound one. It has launched a series called "Kids and Art" — workshops designed for youngsters 6 to 9 years old.

On seven occasions during the 1988-89 year, workshops will be held at each of six public libraries in the county — Granite City, Bethalto, Wood River, Edwardsville, Collinsville and Highland. The after-school programs begin in Granite City today with a presentation on "Classic Clowning" by — who else? — a clown.

Later workshops will feature such topics as adventures in puppeting, Swedish Christmas crafts, Indian games from Cahokia Mounds, storytelling in music, and "sign and dance; sign language and movement."

In addition to fun for children, the series will include basic art values, guest artists, new materials, art techniques and differing areas of the arts.

Horizons can be broadened by these 90-minute workshops, and it is appropriate that the county's arts council is among those blazing the trail.

Legislators differ on CUB's bills

To the editor:

The most recent newsletter of the Illinois Citizens Utility Board tells the CUB members how our state senators and representatives voted on CUB-sponsored bills in the Legislature — bills that deal with utility issues.

I would like to share this information with all utility customers in the 21st District.

Of the two senators in our area, Sen. Hall voted for all of our bills.

Sen. Watson voted for all of them but the one to extend for another year the IRAPP affordable budget plan for those who cannot pay their utility bills.

Of the state representatives in our district, Kurt Granberg, Jim McPike, Sam Wolf and Wyvetter Youngue voted in favor of all CUB-sponsored bills.

On the bill to put a cap on the monthly service charge of the utility companies, Democrat Monroe Flinn voted present and Republican Ron Stephens voted against.

It reminds me of the 1985 session in which both Flinn and Stephens voted against a bill to limit utility companies to 25 percent excess generating capacity.

Stephens maintains that he has voted for CUB bills 90 percent of the time.

One of those favorable votes last year, on the veto override of House Bill 401 (which passed 110 for and 9 against), came after Stephens held a position that CUB did not deserve to put membership forms in state mailings, and after he actively opposed the measure on the House floor.

While CUB primarily testifies on the consumer's behalf before the Illinois Commerce Commission in rate cases, it also continues to fight for the consumer in Springfield by sponsoring legislation that will favor the utility ratepayer.

PBS in need of public sponsor

To the editor:

I don't know if anyone else feels as I do, but I am uneasy when the Public Broadcasting System (PBS) gives us these brief announcements: "The following program is brought to you through the courtesy of..." Then follows a series of brief mentions of well-established businesses in the nation.

To the extent it helps keep PBS alive, I welcome it.

But to the extent it requires decisions by PBS not on the merits of the program, but on whether or not PBS can get sponsors, we have not served the public well. PBS has an excellent reputation for quality programming, but it is the trend that concerns me.

As late as 1962, CBS broadcast an hour-long interview of Igor Tamm, a Soviet physicist, with Marvin Kalb. Can you imagine that happening today on CBS? Or on any other network? Or on PBS?

I cannot. The networks are wedded to the need for large audiences. That's why we have so much violence on television — despite overwhelming evidence that it does serious harm to our society — and why we have so little that is genuinely thought-provoking. Many cable systems offer the House and Senate "in action" on C-SPAN, as well as other programs and committee sessions that they deem of sufficient interest. In some ways, C-SPAN has replaced PBS as the thinking person's television.

If there is a subject that is important but interests few, or is of great controversy but it cannot get sponsors, should PBS be broadcasting a program about it? Yes. Are they likely to now? No.

I am grateful for the MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour and for other good programs that PBS does broadcast.

But we should do better. At one point, we had achieved a reasonably good balance between the commercial stations and public broadcasting. But that status is now changing. A large audience is important now to PBS so it can get sponsors.

PBS had been relatively immune from political and commercial pressures. I want to restore that.

My idea of PBS — and my hope for PBS — is a network relatively free from political and commercial considerations.

That is now being compromised. The answer is adequate appropriations, a sound investment we should make to have a more informed public. U.S. SEN. PAUL SIMON

Fonda's apology unacceptable

To the editor:

To err is human but was it error on the part of Jane Fonda and her husband Tom Hayden to associate in fellowship with North Vietnam during a time of war with the United States and denounce American fighting forces in Vietnam as "capitalist war mongers"?

Since the ending of the Vietnam war, Fonda has shown absolutely no remorse for her actions until the filming of her latest movie was boycotted by protesters. It was then and only then on national television she made a public apology.

I do not believe Fonda can pull the wool over the eyes of the men and women who served in Vietnam and the families who experienced the loss of a loved one. After all, Fonda still claims that — through her actions and those of her husband — they helped to bring an end to the war.

If Fonda wants to take credit for helping end the war, how can she possibly expect Americans to believe her less than sincere apology? I reject her apology and the idea that she is a true patriot to the United States.

I beseech each and every American citizen to boycott any product, now and in the future, that she may put on the market.

The writing on the stall

Driving through Madison the other day, I passed a car with a bumper sticker clearly visible in the rear window, just above where the toddlers sit when Dad's motoring around town.

It read: "Life's a bitch." Undoubtedly there's a message there somewhere. Is the vehicle owner trying to make a social statement? Has life gotten to the point that he displays his feelings for all to see?

Or is it, in this era of bumper-sticker cuteness, just another feeble attempt at climbing the social ladder that exists between peers?

In either case, such stickers are the product of sick minds. Obviously beguiled by someone who cares little about what others think, the obscene-product craze has spawned a whole new generation of miscreants. Today, they're sporting every conceivable word on just about every kind of product.

Coffee cups stare back at you from specialty shop shelves. No longer do they say: "I Love Grandma." Now it's more like: "I Feel Like — Until I've Had My Coffee."

T-shirts no longer serve as protection from the heat. Now they are conduits of billboard messages, the kind of messages that make your skin crawl when you and little Johnny happen to pass one while visiting the local shopping center.

Hats are increasingly carrying the same sort of messages. Sometimes I find it hard carrying on a one-to-one conversation, without letting my eyes and my thoughts wander north of the hairline.

They are offensive, childish and with no redeeming social value, yet such products can be found at every turn in today's society. What has become of us? Why do we cater to trash? We do, otherwise there would be no market for it.

As much as we've progressed technologically, we've regressed socially. Children being brought up today are expected to have certain moral character, but it's hard instilling that fiber with the messages being rained upon us.

They say if you don't like the TV program, switch the channel, but it's impossible to close your eyes while driving down the road.

Best investment ever may be owners home

By Angela Shearer
President
Real Estate Board of Metropolitan St. Louis

Buying a home is the best investment you can make, said Barry R. Schmel and Yvonne T. Patel, whose article "Tax Law Updates Encourage Home Purchases" appeared in the September issue of Real Estate Today, the official publication of the National Association of Realtors.

"Financed purchases have become the most tax-favored investments currently available," Schmel and Patel say. For people interested in purchasing a first home, or trading up their current home, the Tax Reform Act of 1986 and the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 allow excellent benefits.

Schmel is the managing shareholder in the public accounting firm of Schmel, Lieberman and Bender of Rockville, Md., and is a nationally known writer and lecturer. Patel is a tax specialist with the firm. Both authors are certified public accountants.

Capital previously invested in commercial real estate and limited partnerships is no longer tax-favored investment because the TRA '86 categorized income in such a manner that income and losses no longer offset one another.

"For example," the authors said, "passive investment losses can't be used to offset active income or portfolio income." On the other hand, residential real estate provides a reasonable chance for appreciation.

The tax updates provide benefits both for buyers and sellers. Sellers can obtain a tax deferral if they buy another home at an equal or greater price within two years before or after the sale. Sellers, at least six years old before the sale who have owned and used the home as a principal residence for at least three years during the five-year period preceding the sale, may exclude up to $125,000 of taxable income from the gain on the sale.

Magna hosts Seniorama '88

By Martin Richter
Staff affiliate

BELLEVILLE — Thousands of area senior citizens turned up at the Belle-Claire Fairgrounds Exposition Hall on Sept. 23 for Seniorama '88, to take advantage of a whole day of entertainment, informative booths and seminars geared just for them.

Sponsored by Magna Group Inc. and Magna Security Club, the Seniorama offered everything from free health screenings to information on vacations to Hawaii to musical entertainment from the Silvertones.

The event was chaired by Ariene Glasser, who also is coordinator of the Magna Bank of Belleville Security Club. She said she was delighted with the crowd and the number of booths.

"This is fantastic," she said. "I'm so happy; this is really exciting."

Glasser's enthusiasm was matched by that of many senior citizens in attendance. Most seemed impressed at an event organized solely for the benefit of those age 55 and over.

"Everything in here is for senior citizens," Toni Terry, 72, of Wood River, said. "We don't get this opportunity all the time."

Terry was waiting in line to have her hearing checked along with her friends Dorothy Reagan and Viola Rader of Belleville and Katie Carach of Wood River. Carach said she had met a lot of people at the Seniorama, and got a good laugh from the others when she joked that they had really come to meet men.

Helen Mueller of Belleville stuffed brochures and pamphlets into a plastic shopping bag as she browsed at different booths.

"I think anything we can learn to help ourselves and prevent problems is very important," Mueller said. "I've collected a lot of material. Now I've got to find time to get home and read it all."

Wal-Mart Stores receive White House award for improving 'quality of life'

Wal-Mart Stores Inc., Bentonville, Ark., has received a Presidential Award for Private Sector Initiatives for its efforts to improve the quality of life in Wal-Mart communities and to support the fund-raising activities of community action groups.

Wal-Mart was recognized at a White House ceremony on Sept. 29.

The Wal-Mart Stores, through the "Wal-Mart Foundation," sponsored the Wal-Mart Community Involvement Program in which a vehicle through which their employees could help the community.

The Matching Grant Program was developed from the belief that if the employees of Wal-Mart, as well as the community, recognized a viable need, then they would be willing to share the fund-raising responsibilities. The program was set up to encourage employees to hold local fund-raisers for qualifying charities and organizations while at the same time, encouraging customers to participate in the activities.

The Wal-Mart Foundation then matched dollar for dollar up to $2,000 what each store raised for the charities.

The President's Citation Program for Private Sector Initiatives was established to recognize community outreach and volunteer service programs sponsored by various businesses, trade associations, professional societies and other private organizations.

More than 1,000 applicants this year met the program requirements and are eligible to fly the

"C-Flag" which bears the program's slogan "We Can — We Care."

This "C-Flag" distinguishes these organizations as significant contributors to the American spirit of giving and volunteerism. Since the program's establishment, more than 4,500 businesses and associations have qualified for the C-Flag.

Each year, President Ronald Reagan presents 30 awards and 70 citations to the businesses and organizations with the most exemplary private sector initiative programs.

The Citation Program is voluntarily administered by the American Society of Association Executives in cooperation with the White House Office of Private Sector Initiatives.

Louis Railway Club and St. Louis Railroad Suppliers Association.

The award is given annually to outstanding railroad executives. Davidson was chosen in honor of their lifetime achievements in the railroad industry. The Railway Club is made up of active and retired railroad workers living in the metropolitan area.

Davidson began his career

He served as vice president of operation services and planning at BN prior to accepting the TRRA post.

About real estate

Owner should check name on mortgage

Dear Mr. Campbell:

Many years ago I got a divorce. I kept the house, have made the payments since then (and have claimed the interest on my income tax return) and had a quit claim deed issued in my name. At the time of the divorce I called the bank where we had the mortgage and asked to have the account put in my name. They said they could not do that since the loan was made to my (former) husband and myself. In order to do that, I would need to apply for a new mortgage, which I did not want to do.

They said I could continue on as things were, if my ex-husband had no objections to his name being on the mortgage. (He didn't.) The house's payment continues to be taken out automatically from my checking account (in my married name). I am now remarried with a new name and would like to get all of this straightened out. Or does it matter? My checking account is in my previous name, the mortgage is still in my old name along with my former husband.

At the end of the year, when I received the statement of interest for tax purposes, there was a form asking for Social Security numbers on the account, plus other information regarding marital status and name changes. I don't know my former husband's number and am reluctant to fill out this form. I do not want to do anything that would disturb my present mortgage, and low interest rate. Should I fill out the form disclosing my divorce, marriage, new name, etc., and just leave blank the line for my ex-husband's Social Security number?

Mrs. D.M.H. Worthington, Ohio.

Answer: My oh, my! You really do have your mortgage name and on this score, it may not be as troublesome to unravel as it seems.

We took your problem to Emily Card, a West Coast financial consultant specializing in women's credit problems and women who was instrumental in achieving congressional passage of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act of 1974.

Your first course of action, Card believes is to change your checking account to your new name so that those mortgage payments coming out of it will be traceable to the right party (you). Also, you haven't already done that quit claim deed should be filed with the court as soon as possible.

But, she adds, it's advisable, too, to get the mortgage name and on this score, the law says that the lender shouldn't make you reapply, because of the change in your marital status, unless they can show that there has been a change in your ability to make the payments. And, on this score, Card feels that you are on pretty safe ground.

You said that the divorce took place "many years ago," and, since then, you've been making the payments with, apparently, no sweat. She suggests that you take the quit claim to the bank and have a little heart-to-heart chat with them about changing the name without any nonsense about rewriting it.

Ways to check for, cope with, lead in drinking water explained

By Neil F. Hartigan
Illinois attorney general

Q. I recently read an article on lead in our drinking water. Is it something we should be concerned about?

A. You probably take for granted that the water that comes out of your tap is safe for drinking and cooking. But this may not be so.

If you live in a house that is less than five years old and lead solder was used with your copper piping, chances are your water has high levels of lead contamination, and should be tested. You are also at high risk if the plumbing in your home was installed before 1930, since lead pipes were commonly used then.

Since you cannot see, taste, or smell lead dissolved in water, the only way to find out the amount of lead in your drinking water is to have it tested by a competent laboratory.

Your local health department or water company may be able to do the test for you or recommend someone who is qualified.

There are two things you can do immediately to reduce your exposure if testers found your drinking water contaminated with lead, or while you are awaiting test results.

First, don't use water that has been in contact with your home's pipes for more than six hours. The longer the water sits in the pipes, the more lead contamination it could pick up. Before using any water, turn on the cold water faucet until the water becomes as cold as you can get.

Second, use only water from the cold water tap for drinking, cooking and especially making baby formula. If you need hot water, draw it from the cold tap and heat it.

Hot water from the tap is more likely to contain higher levels of lead because lead dissolves more quickly in hot water.

There are other things to do to reduce your exposure to lead. For example, you can buy treatment devices.

The effectiveness of such devices can vary, however, so before purchasing one, check with your health department.

You can also reduce your lead intake by purchasing bottled water, or by instructing any plumber you hire to use only lead-free materials for repairs.

Women will soon own half of private U.S. businesses

By Sylvia Porter

The large-scale entry of women into the work force is one of the most important economic developments of the 20th century. The number of businesses owned solely by women has surged to more than 3.8 million, representing 28 percent of all private U.S. businesses in the United States.

By the year 2000 — less than 12 years from now — women-owned businesses will represent 50 percent of all privately owned U.S. businesses. IRS statistics show that between 1984 and 1985 the number of women-owned businesses increased 11 percent, while receipts from these businesses skyrocketed to $56 billion in just one year.

This has revolutionized life styles in the United States, turning relationships between men and women upside down. There is no comparing the life of a woman born into post-World War II society with that of a woman living in the 1920s.

While the American woman as a business owner is not a new phenomenon, and outstanding successes have been noted throughout the 20th century, what is new is the rapid growth of successful woman entrepreneur. Some have inherited their role, but most of the shining successes have started on their own.

As Pat Harrison, president of the National Women's Economic Alliance (NWEA) in Washington, D.C., and author of "America's New Women Entrepreneurs," points out, women are recognizing their own entrepreneurial talents and creating profits and jobs in the process. Other countries are recognizing that the free enterprise system provides its own incentives, encourages creativity in the marketplace and provides opportunity for employment where none existed before.

In response to requests from the Small Business Program of Ireland, the NWEA recently named six American women, representing manufacturing and service industries in the United States, to consult with representatives of Irish women in Dublin. (Women-owned businesses are the fastest growing segment of Ireland's small-business community.)

The six women who accompanied Harrison to Ireland for the workshop were:

•Bernadine, chairman and chief executive officer of Oberdorfer Foundries and Oberdorfer Pumps of Syracuse, N.Y. She has been recognized nationwide for her business acumen and community contributions.

•Joyce Eddy, president and founder of Habasham Plantation Corp., a furniture manufacturer in Toccoa, Ga. In 1983, Eddy was named Georgia's "Small Business Person of the Year."

•Janice Heath, co-founder and president of Heath Industries Inc. and Heath Electronics Manufacturing Corp. of Glenns Ferry, Idaho. Her firm projects $5 million in annual gross sales and employs 80 people, 50 percent of them women.

•Paula Lambert, co-owner of the Mozzarella Co., Dallas, who runs the company as a Washington, D.C. based, is the only specialty cheesemaker in the Southwest.

•Rebecca Smith Tedesco, owner and president of Smith Tedesco Inc., a Washington, D.C. temporary help service specializing in office, accounting and technical personnel and providing annual revenues of more than $3 million.

•Frankie Welch, president of Welch Designs, a Washington, D.C., manufacturer of scarves and bags. Many of her designs are presented in Smithsonian's First Ladies collection.

Entrepreneurial traits demonstrated by successful people on a daily basis include: self-confidence; strong drive; commitment; goal setting at increasingly higher levels of difficulty; and optimistic attitudes toward people and life.

They are "self-starters who do not wait for the perfect environment before beginning," Harrison said. "Additionally, entrepreneurs understand that success is not a 9-to-5 endeavor."

An American entrepreneur, for example, will look at the dramatic drop in the value of the dollar, and see that the dollar market is four times larger than the U.S. domestic market, that 95 percent of the world's population lives outside the U.S. and start creating a product for export. The non-entrepreneur will look at the drop in the dollar and bemoan the fact that shopping is no longer a bargain in Europe.

Entrepreneurs throughout the world have many qualities in common, outside differences in age, geographical location, race and education. As Harrison says, "They all regard roadblocks the same way — a roadblock tells you one thing, there's a road on the other side. Entrepreneurs don't give up until they find that road."

What is health worth? Fees may be revised

When you're sick and see your doctor, you want the best possible diagnosis and advice, plus the best possible performance of whatever help is found to be necessary.

But which is more important — the counseling, or the specific procedures or operations that follow?

THIS QUESTION was considered important enough for Congress to begin an exhaustive study two and a half years ago.

Now, a proposed new physician fee schedule has emerged and will be considered by Congress in the near future.

It would decrease the pay of some highly-specialized surgeons while providing more earnings for internists and other doctors.

"DISTORTED and inequitable fees" are cited by William C. Hsiao, economist with the Harvard School of Public Health.

Chief architect of the plan announced by the federal Health Care Financing Administration, Hsiao said it is intended to correct a fee system that pays physicians too little for examining patients and too much for certain surgical procedures.

He has tried to determine the amount of work required for

Regional Roundup

By Bill Winter

everything doctors do, from checkups to brain surgery, so they can be paid "what their services are worth."

IF ACCEPTED by Congress, which requested it, the plan will be the pay for those who treat elderly Medicare patients.

It may also be used to determine the income of doctors working under state-run Medicare programs for the indigent, as well as payments approved by private insurance companies.

Hsiao says, "Some of the primary-care specialties will rise, and a few of the surgical specialties may see a sharp drop in fees for their services."

"But the impact will not be uniform. Some specialties will not be affected very much."

THE 2,000-PAGE plan could have a big effect on the nation's health care system, but it doesn't give a precise diagnosis on the health of that system.

From the viewpoint of Metro East and metropolitan area hospitals and doctors, the health care system is in trouble because a severe economic squeeze is being applied by federal and state agencies.

Health centers have been voicing concern, and are continuing to do so, over the future of Medicare and the effect of inadequate funding of that program on their ability to remain in business.

THEY ARE SAYING, collectively and individually, that: "If Medicare payments remain inadequate, many hospitals may have to curtail services that are important to their communities."

These might include communication networks linking hospitals with aged persons who live alone, and a variety of clinics providing needed services for children and indigent patients.

"With some medical services operating at a deficit, they may have to be curtailed, even though they are not readily available at a nearby hospital."

"INSUFFICIENT PAYMENTS may complicate the task of attracting and retaining enough qualified staff members to assure high-quality care."

"Some hospitals may have to forego acquiring new technology or delay remodeling parts of their buildings used for patient care services."

"Continued pressures to discharge patients 'quicker and sicker' could result in elderly patients returning to a home environment poorly suited to meeting their medical problems."

East St. Louis sues IDOT for not hiring minorities

By Bonita Gower-Tillman Staff writer

EAST ST. LOUIS — A class action suit was filed Oct. 7 against the Illinois Department of Transportation alleging the agency did not hire 10 percent minorities on highway construction projects.

The suit seeks $20 million in damages.

Eric Vickers, a St. Louis attorney representing Mayor Carl Officer, filed the suit in federal court in East St. Louis on behalf of city residents and for Officer as a private businessman.

Vickers made the announcement Thursday in the mayor's office. The mayor was absent because of a virus, said James Ingram, his press secretary.

According to the suit, IDOT failed to meet the standards of the Surface Transportation Act concerning disadvantaged business enterprises (DBEs) by:

• Certifying "front" companies for work as minority or disadvantaged businesses;

• Disbursing $20 million to non-minority businesses, which IDOT knew or should have known were not minority or disadvantaged businesses;

• Failing to establish procedures to properly enforce DBE certification requirements;

• Awarding highway construction work to general contractors who did not comply with the 10 percent set-aside for DBE requirements;

• Acting with gross indifference and reckless disregard for the rights of minority and disadvantaged businesses.

Vickers cited the $25.9 million

Martin Luther King Jr. Bridge contract awarded to Massman Construction Co., Kansas City, Kan., as an example of an allegedly improper award of state construction jobs.

"Of that contract, only 4.5 percent of it went to minority businesses," he said.

Although businesses owned by women are considered disadvantaged businesses, Vickers said that is a "fallacy" of the Surface Transportation Act, but one which can be rectified in each state.

"Some states have specific set-asides for women because many so-called women-owned businesses are not so, but are owned by white men," he said.

Vickers said he helped eliminate more than 100 Illinois "front" companies in a similar suit in 1982. There was no monetary damage request attached to that suit.

The suit against IDOT came less than a week after IDOT stopped monthly motor fuel tax payments to East St. Louis and asked that $3 million in mispaid funds be refunded. However, Vickers said the city's suit is not retaliation.

"This is separate and independent. It's not retaliation in any manner. It's been in the works for quite a while," he said.

He said other contractors in the city support the lawsuit and are expected to join later.

Vickers also forwarded a letter to the U.S. Department of Transportation asking that all funds to IDOT be stopped until the agency complies with the Surface Transportation Act.

Calvo nominated to lead Illinois judges

The nominating committee of the Illinois Judges Association has nominated Judge Thomas L. Calvo to be president of that organization for the 1988-89 year.

Calvo, formerly of Granite City, served eight years in the Illinois General Assembly before being appointed to the Third Judicial Circuit in 1975.

He was later voted chief judge of that circuit by his fellow judges. In 1987, he was elevated to the Fifth District Appellate Court by appointment.

Calvo is currently a candidate for the Illinois Supreme Court from the Fifth Judicial District, a 37-county area. There are 102 counties in Illinois.

The Illinois Judges Association is an organization devoted to a better judicial system. It sponsors seminars for newly elected judges throughout Illinois and its primary function is educational.

In light of his accomplishments and experience, the nominating committee feels he is well qualified to head the organization, a spokesman said.

The Illinois Judges Association will elect officers later this year in Chicago.

Taxes diverted for 'Build Illinois'

SPRINGFIELD — Nearly $47 million from the state's General Revenue Fund was used to support the Build Illinois program in fiscal 1988 because the tax established to support the program was insufficient, Comptroller Roland W. Burris reported.

In his monthly report on state finances, Burris noted that proceeds from the used car sales tax, earmarked to offset the diversion of other sales tax revenues, still lag behind original estimates.

As a result, $80.5 million from the sales tax diversion was deposited in fiscal 1988 into the Build Illinois Fund. Only $33.6 million from the used car tax was deposited into the General Revenue Fund, resulting in a diversion of $46.9 million in other sales tax revenues to support Build Illinois during the recently concluded fiscal year.

Regarding Build Illinois, established three years ago this month, Burris noted the program has undergone major changes since it was approved by the General Assembly in 1985.

The most dramatic change took effect in September 1988, when the bond authorization was increased by $378.5 million to $1,326,500,000. The increase is earmarked for public infrastructure needs, bringing to just over $1 billion the bonding authorization for Build Illinois infrastructure projects.

The sale of dedicated revenue bonds is the primary funding source for the program and the sales tax is the dedicated revenue. In this respect, Build Illinois bonds are as secure as general revenue bonds, which were traditionally sold to finance projects now covered by the program.

However, because Build Illinois bonds are retired over 30 years instead of the 25-year general obligation bonds, there are higher debt service costs, Burris said.

The expanded bond authorization will mean annual debt service will increase from $15 million in fiscal 1986 to $120.5 million in fiscal 1993.

Burris acknowledged the importance of the infrastructure projects included in Build Illinois but said the $378.5 million expansion was necessary, in part, because projects included early in the program were non-infrastructure projects.

Illinois health system accused of costing more, providing less

SPRINGFIELD — The health care system in Illinois and the U.S. is costing more and providing less, a statewide group charged Sept. 27.

The Illinois Public Action Council, a liberal coalition of consumer groups, labor unions and senior citizen organizations, called for guaranteed minimum health care "like that provided in other western industrialized nations."

It also endorsed Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis' plan to require employers to provide health insurance, as a "first step."

An IPAC study said 15 percent of the Illinois population is without health insurance coverage and the number has been increasing for the past six years. It also cited a 9 percent decline in the number of hospital beds and 24 percent fewer people using the health care system in 1988 compared to 1980.

Over the same six-year period, per capita health expenditures increased 78 percent in Illinois, the report said.

The report listed various federal reports and the American Hospital Association as the sources of information.

IPAC Executive Director Robert Creamer said polls of the group's 150,000 members consistently indicated their biggest concern is a fear of not being able to afford health care, particularly for unexpected major illnesses such as cancer.

The study also alleged a 63 percent increase in health care costs nationally from 1980 to 1986, more than double the rate of all other consumer items.

SIU chancellor asked to fire law firm

Illinois Education Association faculty leaders have called on SIU Chancellor Lawrence Pettit to sever the university's relationship with the law firm of Seyfarth and Shaw. The firm advises SIU on bargaining strategy.

In a joint letter to the chancellor, dated Oct. 3, Dr. Sheila Ruth and Dr. Gary Kolb called on him to act at once. Ruth is chairman of the SIUE Faculty Organizing Committee and Kolb is chairman of the SIUC Faculty Organizing Committee.

Pointing out that Illinois Education Labor Board hearings are now over and the decisions rendered, the IEA faculty leaders said the university should have no further use for the services of Seyfarth and Shaw. They alleged the firm has a nationwide reputation for "union-busting."

The IEA said that, based on information it obtained through a Freedom of Information Act request, SIU has spent $318,124 on the services of Seyfarth and Shaw since fiscal 1985. "The enormity has created concern among faculty, staff, students, and the community. It has become a subject of discussion even in the state Legislature," the letter to the chancellor contained.

On Sept. 30, the labor relations board issued its decision on the composition of SIU units. The IEA called it a total victory upholding positions taken by the IEA since April 1985 inclusion of department chairmen in the faculty unit, separate bargaining units for SIUE, SIUC and the SIU School of Dental Medicine, and separate bargaining units for faculty and professional staff.

A meeting of the parties to the election was held Oct. 8 at Springfield to establish election procedures. An election is expected to be scheduled for early November.

SIUE union representation vote set

Elections for union representation for faculty and staff at Southern Illinois University will be held Wednesday, Nov. 16, the Illinois Education Labor Relations Board has decided.

Five separate elections will be involved, with the ballot choices not all the same.

A ruling last month by the Labor Relations Board to allow the elections ended several years of hearings and administrative appeals, despite the fact that collective bargaining for university faculties has been allowed in Illinois since 1984.

The professional staffs at the Edwardsville, East St. Louis and Carbondale campuses and the faculty at Carbondale have three choices: the Illinois Education Association, the American Federation of Teachers, or no union representation.

The Edwardsville faculty group will choose between the American Federation of Teachers/American Association of University Professors and no representation.

At the dental school at Alton, the choice will be between the IEA and no representation.

If no choice receives a simple majority (50 percent plus one), a second election would be scheduled Dec. 7, according to Marcus Albrecht, a higher education organizer for the IEA.

It is "entirely possible" that the outcome will be different among the five groups, he said.

State news

Public service video promotes disabled

In conjunction with Disability Employment Awareness Month, the Illinois Department of Rehabilitation Services is releasing a new public service video on Supported Employment.

The video, "It's More Than a Job," explains Supported Employment, a vocational rehabilitation program in which people with severe disabilities are being competitively employed with the aid of a "job coach," someone who assists the employees on the job.

The program helps find jobs for people who in the past were thought to be unemployable, or at best suitable for labor in sheltered workshops.

Fort Massac event to show 18th century

Six reactivated 18th-century military units featuring more than 280 authentically uniformed personnel will participate in the 15th Annual Fort Massac Encampment from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Oct. 15 and 16 at historic Fort Massac State Park near Metropolis on U.S. 45 in Massac County.

The event will be held from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, and a highlight will be a mock battle and tactical demonstration staged at 3 p.m. both days. More than 20 craftsmen will demonstrate period crafts and offer their work for sale.

Enforcement aimed at child support

Child support collections in Illinois have reached a record $107.6 million during the state's 1988 financial year, according to Gov. Jim Thompson, who proclaimed this Child Support Month. Thompson praised the General Assembly for passing House Bill 2882 this spring to assure parents provide support regularly and promptly. Payments for child support will be deducted automatically from non-custodial parents' paychecks in all child support cases after Jan. 1.

Only cases that have an alternative arrangement approved by the courts will be exempt from the program.

The state expects to raise $8 million to $14 million more in the first year of the new law. Public Aid Director Susan Suter said that since 1988 state child support collections have increased by more than 1,300 percent. Those who need assistance can call 1-800-447-4278.

Grant will help homeless find jobs

The Illinois Department of Public Aid has received a $600,000 federal grant to fund Project Opportunity, a demonstration program to help the homeless find work and housing, Gov. Jim Thompson said.

"Project Opportunity, which will be operated by the department and the Travelers and Immigrants Aid of Chicago, will help people learn skills, find full-time jobs and secure permanent housing," Thompson said.

The one-year project will help about 225 homeless people who are most likely to benefit from job training and job placement services. Illinois will receive the largest single share of $7.6 million distributed by the federal government to 20 states for homeless assistance projects.

University of Illinois airport to be upgraded

A $4.47 million contract has been awarded for major improvements to the University of Illinois-Willard Airport.

The work will include the construction, lighting and marking of an air-carrier apron with a connecting taxiway, a new entrance road, a service drive and automobile parking lot. Construction is scheduled to begin immediately and be completed in June.

The airport is served by scheduled passenger flights of Allegheny Commuter, American Eagle, Continental Express, Delta Connection, Midway Connection, Piedmont, Trans World, Trans World Express and United Express.

'Made in Illinois' gift guide available

From Galena wines to Southern Illinois handicrafts, Christmas shoppers and everyday consumers will be able to purchase hundreds of Illinois products from their own homes through the "Made in Illinois" gift guide, now available throughout the state, including at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

The 56-page buyer's guide features items from more than 100 state small businesses.

The guide is available at SIUE at the Small Business Development Center, Building 2, Room 3315. Those interested are asked to call 692-2929 to check if copies are in supply. Small businesses that wish to advertise in the 1988 issue may write to Lura Lynn Ryan, Office of the Lieutenant Governor, 214 State House, Springfield, Ill. 62706.

Monsanto schedules free jazz festival at Kiener Plaza in downtown St. Louis

Some of the best jazz artists in the business will be featured in downtown St. Louis at a free Jazz Festival, sponsored by Monsanto Co., in cooperation with the Arts and Education Council.

The festival will take place in the Morton D. May Amphitheater of Kiener Plaza from 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 16.

The Art Ensemble of Chicago will headline the show with "Great Black Music - Ancient to the Future." The group features a large assortment of acoustic instruments from around the world and employs humor, mime, magic, special effects, dance, poetry and costumes. Ensemble member Lester Bowie is a native St. Louisan.

Afternoon events will begin at 1 p.m. with the 16-piece George Hudson Orchestra. Hudson formed the orchestra in 1942, and was inducted into the Jazz Hall of Fame in Birmingham, Ala., in 1982.

Tracer, a group featuring Chad Evans, will take the stage prior to the Art Ensemble. The group includes St. Louisans Durrell Mixon on bass, Peth Williams on keyboard, Tony Saputo on drums and Tom Byrne on guitar.

The Freddie Washington Quartet will feature Willie Pickens from Chicago on the grand piano. Washington's group has been playing in area clubs.

The concert will close with the John Hicks All Star quintet featuring Walter Booker on bass, Elise Wood on flute, Chico Freeman on saxophone and Jimmy Cobb on drums. Hicks, a former St. Louisan, has been featured in the past two jazz festivals.

"We are indeed fortunate to have a chance to hear all these outstanding groups - their members are world-class musicians well known to jazz followers," said Dr. John Mason, president of Monsanto Fund, the philanthropic arm of Monsanto Co.

The appearance of the jazz artists is sponsored for the second year by Monsanto Co., in cooperation with the Arts and Education Council, and with partial assistance from WSIE, 88.7 FM. The St. Louis Ambassadors will handle the concessions.

Current exhibit at art museum includes earthy, offbeat works

The most striking attribute of the "New Sculpture/Six Artists" exhibit, showing at the St. Louis Art Museum, is the open and direct way the artists communicate.

For museumgoers accustomed to being bamboozled by the aesthetics of abstraction and minimalism, an encounter with this exhibit can be a liberating experience.

British artist Richard Long is an earth sculptor. Many of his works are created outdoors, where he might shape a landscape simply by repeatedly walking a series of lines across it. Such sculptures are necessarily impermanent, subject to natural weathering.

For his two indoor pieces at the art museum, created specifically for this exhibit, Long has made use of natural materials indigenous to the mid-Mississippi Valley, Missouri limestone and Mississippi River mud. From the latter he has created a large mural with handprints, generating forceful geometric patterns, the overall effect of which is somewhat akin to op art.

James Turrell also has employed the earth, itself, as a sculptural medium. In 1976 he purchased an inactive volcano near Flagstaff, Ariz., upon which he has created spaces which dramatize various forms of natural light.

In the exhibit, Turrell's "Atlantic Charge" uses artificial light to dramatize a viewer's perception of space. The work takes up an entire room, and upon entering, one encounters a large purple rectangle glowing dimly in the darkened room. As you approach this rectangle, and you can actually perceive it with your hand, you become aware of how dramatically your perceptions of the room's space and lighting have been manipulated.

More conventional is the sculpture of 36-year-old Kansas artist Tom Otterness. The large figures in bronze are an arresting conspiracy of primitive and modern aesthetics, used to create scenes with both narrative and allegorical content.

Several pieces make up a tableau titled "Spider," in which dismembered humanoid figures are seen to advance toward a hostile encounter with a monstrous spider, conjuring a kind of science fiction scenario. The ominous impact of Otterness' work is tempered by a bizarre sense of humor, making for a viewing experience that is unconventional and quite fascinating.

The large sculptures of British artist Richard Deacon are abstractions, but even here the viewer quickly keys into the aesthetic values at play. "Double talk" is a huge, laminated wood sculpture, beautiful both for its spatial interaction and, close up, for the painstaking craft of the artist in generating such graceful forms from the wood.

"New Sculpture/Six Artists" is being shown through Oct. 30 in the special exhibition gallery of the St. Louis Art Museum. Cost of admission is $3 for adults, $2 for adults and senior citizens, and $1 for children ages 6 to 12. The exhibit is free to all on each Tuesday, and free at all times to members of the Friends of the St. Louis Art Museum.

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday, and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday. The Museum is closed on Monday. Those who wish more information may call (314) 721-0067.

Couple survive weekend in New York

Remember the movie starring Jack Lemmon and Sandy Dennis from 1970 called "The Out of Towners"? In the Neil Simon script, Lemmon goes to New York City for a job interview and ends up being mugged, misdirected and manhandled at every possible turn.

Clayton-based attorney Edward J. Griesedieck and his wife, Anne, understand how Lemmon's character felt. During their recent 48-hour sojourn to the Big Apple, the couple had a somewhat rotten time.

The Griesediecks saw a mailman shot by a robber in front of Tiffany's and later that same day they spent two hours trapped in a crowded elevator that fell five floors before finally coming to a stop near the basement of their hotel.

SPRINGFIELD — Results of the first-ever required state assessment of reading in the third, sixth and eighth grades show that Illinois pupils in the third and sixth grades understand what they read better than their counterparts in the nation.

The state's eighth graders nearly equaled the national average, State Superintendent of Education Ted Sanders

Based on a scale score ranging from 1 to 500, the average reading score for Illinois students was 250 as compared to the national average of 230 for third graders, 240 for sixth graders, and 252 for eighth graders. The national averages were calculated by the State Board of Education using nationally normed standardized reading

"The assessment data gathered by the state is another important piece of a larger picture, which focuses on the ongoing ing need for the state and local schools to improve and sustain the educational services and programs offered to our children.

"Test results of the statewide reading assessment have been equated with nationally normed standardized reading scores so that we can predict how well third-, sixth- and eighth-grade students in our schools are doing, on average, in relation to their peers throughout the state and the nation," Sanders explained.

Results of the statewide reading assessment, which was required under provisions of the 1985 Education Reform Act, will be reported to the public on local school report cards by Oct. 31, the deadline for districts to publicize their school report card data.

Reading assessment scores are reported at the school, district and state level. Each school and district will receive constructive meaning (reading comprehension) scores as well as information regarding student responses on topic familiarity, reading strategies and literary experiences.

This additional information is expected to help school officials understand how these factors affect reading comprehension.

The statewide assessment seeks to determine how well Illinois students are performing in relation to the state's reading goal: "As a result of their schooling, students will be able to read, comprehend, interpret, evaluate and use written material," Sanders said.

The test used to assess the reading performance of 121,330 third graders, 108,799 sixth graders and 107,791 eighth graders was developed by the State Education Board in coordination with the Center for the Study of Reading at the University of Illinois in Urbana and committees of Illinois educators. The state reading assessment accomplished the following tasks:

- Uses full-length texts similar to those encountered by students every day, e.g., narratives as well as expositions in science and history;

• Measures students' topic familiarity before they read, and then uses this measure to help explain student performance;

• Ask higher-level questions which evaluate students' abilities to make inferences, explain causal relationships, apply knowledge to new situations, and summarize what they have read;

- Provides students with the option of selecting one, two or three right answers for each comprehension question;

•Measures students' awareness of reading strategies and their ability to select the most appropriate strategy to solve them:

•Surveys students' literacy experiences including their reading and writing activities in school and at home

A preliminary analysis of the reading assessment data by Sanders included the following observations:

1. The Illinois advantage is greatest at grade three, but some of the advantage is lost at higher grades. The average third grader in Illinois will outperform 56 percent of the nation's third graders, while the average Illinois eighth grader performs about the same as his or her national counterpart.

2. While some schools achieved exceptional levels of performance, other schools did very poorly. For instance, 47 schools at the third grade, 15 at the sixth grade and 10 at the eighth grade had average scores

3. Nearly 5,500 students (1.6 percent) achieved the highest possible score, while about 8,300 students (2.5 percent) scored at or below the chance or guess level.

4. Students' habits and attitudes toward reading may offer some clues for developing better readers. For example, the percentage of students who reported as part of the assessment process that they fail to read on their own initiative more than doubles between third and eighth

Twin Warriors face SLUH in Homecoming

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

GRANITE CITY — Outside of the Chicago area, Granite City High School has the largest enrollment of any high school in the state.

According to Illinois High School Association figures, GCHS has an enrollment of 2,664. Remarkably, only 25 of those were suited up for the Warriors' 41-13 loss to Edwardsville last Friday at Memorial Stadium.

The lack of numbers can be attributed to many things. But the bottom line seems to be that 1988 is practically a lost season. The task facing Ron Yates and his staff the next three weeks is to get this year's junior class into the right frame of mind to come back and make something out of 1989.

"Our juniors have to grow up," Yates said. "They just haven't matured to the point where they are ready to face the type of competition we face each week. I know it was only our second game rather than our sixth game, so I'm willing to give them the benefit of the doubt. But we didn't come to play against Edwardsville, and that's a big disappointment."

Yates usually has had from 18 to 22 seniors on his team. This year, he has 10 seniors — two of whom didn't play last year. Of the remaining eight, seven are starters.

"If we had 20 seniors like we usually do, I think we could account for ourselves better than we have," he said. "And this year we had 12 juniors from last year's sophomore team that didn't come out. A couple of those might come back as seniors, but this is an important year to miss. I know some of them get jobs or whatever, but it's tough for them to sit out a year and come back and compete in the Southwestern Conference.

Now the Warriors prepare for Friday's Homecoming game against SLUH at 7:30 p.m. Granite City will need a big effort somewhere in the next three weeks. SLUH is 4-2, while Alton and Belleville East are both in the running for the playoffs.

"We'll just have to have a lot of patience," Yates said. "We might start dressing some sophomores who have performed well."

One sophomore who will definitely dress — and start again at quarterback — is Bob Thomas. In his first varsity start, Thomas completed seven of 21 passes for 73 yards, with one touchdown and two interceptions. Seven of his passes were dropped.

"If we don't have those dropped passes, Bobby has an excellent second half," Yates said. "We had him in the shotgun in the second half and he's much better back there. Larry Hahne does a good job snapping the ball in the shotgun, and it's just much easier for most high school quarterbacks to work out of the shotgun.

The Warriors managed only 27 yards rushing, with Thomas getting 19 of those yards on five scrambles.

"Our line is very inexperienced," Yates said. "They did a creditable job pass blocking, but we have a lot to work on rushing the ball."

Joe Wallace will line up again at split end with Thomas taking over at quarterback. It's a line-up change that might last.

"Bobby and Joe will compete at quarterback next year," Yates said. "But Joe will have to be a lot better to win the job. I can always line him up outside and he can be a weapon for us where Bobby can't. Joe has great speed and can run reverse plays and throw the ball off the reverse. I'm also going to work him at tight end. He could be a tight end that goes deep, which not many high school teams have."

Edwardsville burned the Warriors for 419 yards and 41 points. Rob McNally completed 14 of 19 passes for 180 yards and two touchdowns. The Tigers also piled up 229 yards rushing at six different runners ran for at least 20 yards. The only dent the Warriors made in the Tiger offense came when Timmy Noud returned an interception 16 yards for a third-quarter touchdown. (Correction: It was Timmy Noud, not his twin brother Terry, who scored the touchdown. Terry was incorrectly credited with the touchdown in Sunday's game story.)

"Timmy made a nice play," Yates said. "And it was nice to see him in the first game back."

Short soccer season already winding down

By Dave Whaley

GRANITE CITY — It's hard to believe, but the Warrior soccer team has only four more games before the season ends.

Those who feel like the season just started aren't alone. The Warriors started two games before the teachers' strike, and four weeks out of the season. Granite City returned and won two of three games in the Tournament of Champions.

"That's a 3-2 on-field record, almost strike-induced forfeit make the record read in the petting 3-14. The home stretch starts today at 4 p.m. when the Warriors travel to Cahokia for a game against the winless Comanches. The varsity game will be played first at Cahokia High School.

By the time the regular season is over, the Warriors will have played only three games against Illinois schools. That's not all bad, said Gene Baker.

"We don't mind playing teams like SLUH and McCluer," he said. "I just wish we had more time."

Since he lost 16 seniors from last year's state champions, Baker could have used a full season to get to know the 1988 Warriors.

"We still need to find out some things about this team," he said. "We need to play hard under any circumstances. You can say all you want about the strike, about John VanBuskirk being sick or about a referee's bad call, but there should be no excuses."

Baker was referring to the 2-1 loss to SLUH last Friday which kept the Warriors out of the Tournament of Champions final four for the second straight year. VanBuskirk was on the bench with the flu, while the Junior Bills' first goal came when John Traina apparently knocked the ball loose from Warrior keeper Scott Swanson when Swanson had the ball smothered in the crease.

Under other circumstances, people would be pleased. Baker said. "But we have a game plan that our players have to stick to at all times. I don't know where we stand now. We're going to find out in the next couple of days. We will be trying some different things in practice."

Today's game at Cahokia figures to be another chance to experiment, since the Comanches have not won a game. Baker is planning on an all-senior starting lineup, but he said it's unlikely there will be a recognition day for the seniors even though there are three home games left.

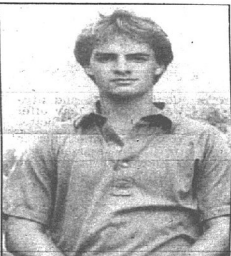

"It will be nice just to play a game rather than being in a tournament like last week," Baker said. "We can conduct things a little differently and learn some things."

Scott Stone and Chris Nolan are tied for the team scoring lead with three goals each. Nolan had a penalty kick goal in each of the tournament games.

After today's game, the Warriors host Belleville West at 7 p.m. Saturday — their only Southwestern Conference game of the year. Granite City hosts McCluer North on Monday and SLUH next Thursday.

The Warriors will still be the top seed in their regional. They will host Madison (0-2) at 2 p.m. Oct. 22. No. 2 seed Roxana (0-2) will host No. 3 Wood River (7-4-2) at 10 a.m. that day. The winners will meet for the regional championship Oct. 24 at 7 p.m. at the home field of the higher seeded team.

ROXANA — The Lady Warriors got an easy victory over an overmatched Roxana Shell team on Wednesday, 15-5 and 15-1.

It was Granite City's second victory of the year — and first in just 24 hours, after the first Tuesday over Alton.

The Warriors had to forfeit eight games during the teachers' strike, but with the back-to-back wins, their record is now 2-5 in games played and 2-16 overall.

Roxana got off to an early 4-0 lead in the first game, but the lead was short-lived. The Warriors were dominant at the net and overpowered the Shells with a strong serving game to win.

Warrior coach Don Deterding is proud of his team's progress.

"Our schedule was very tough at the beginning of the year and we were a young team without much confidence," Deterding said. "Lisa Kult is our only returning starter and we have just three seniors on the team."

Kult was the catalyst in the first game. With the Warriors down 4-2, Kult got her first game to serve. The Warriors won nine straight points to take an 11-4 lead and the Shells never recovered.

The second game did not take very long. The Warriors got off to a quick 8-1 lead before Deterding substituted to bring in his best server, senior Sharon Filkins.

Filkins promptly drilled two unreturnable serves over the net, one of them an ace, to put Granite City on top 10-1.

derella story of the Collinsville golf squad came to an end, Roxana took home before the Berning will write another chapter this weekend at the Danville Country Club when he competes in the state tournament beginning on Friday.

Berning finished with a 37 on the front nine before blowing 40 on the back nine to finish with a 77, two strokes better than the cutoff mark.

Besides Berning, Quincy's Tony Carnivale, Edwardsville's Jay Hepler and Mt. Zion's Jason Enloe also finished with 77s to force a playoff for fifth-eight place.

The playoff lasted four holes before Carnivale chipped in a shot from the fringe of the green to win fifth place.

Berning then rammed in a

Trojans hope to reverse fortunes with more Homecoming success

By Mike Blacksheere

MADISON — There's good news and bad news as the Trojans prepare for their Homecoming game against Freeburg tomorrow.

The good news is Don Smith is in his fifth year as head coach at Madison and he has never lost a Homecoming game.

The bad news is that during Smith's tenure, the Trojans had never lost five games in a season until they fell to 1-5 last week with their 14-6 loss at Red Bud. So past trends don't seem to mean very much this year.

But Smith will try some different things in tomorrow's 7:30 game at Sam Dymally Memorial Field in an effort to get the Trojans back to their old winning ways.

"We have been working on the wishbone in practice this week, and we may try to use it in the Freeburg game to get a little bit better blocking for our running backs," Smith said. "We have not blocked very well all year, so we are going to put both Craig Ingram and Tony Treadway in the backfield with Ian Smith and see if they can block for him."

All of Madison's opponents have been overplaying the running game to the outside, so Smith thinks they should try to run inside.

"We have good speed, so everyone we have played has concentrated on keeping us from getting out and turning the corner," Smith said. "We are going to run more up the middle and not let Freeburg overplay us to the outside."

Madison has very little depth, so the Trojans have really suffered this year when players have been unable to play because of injuries and disciplinary problems.

That finally won't be a problem for the first time in weeks in the Freeburg game — or so Smith hopes.

"The team is healthy and we haven't had any other problems lately, so that is good for a change," Smith said. "We have had a lot of activities this week for Homecoming, so I hope that will help us a little bit getting fired up for the game. Freeburg is a good team and they are better, but I think we can win this game."

It has already been a season that Smith would probably like to forget about, but the Trojans could give their coach another Homecoming to remember.

OFF TO THE RACES: This is about the only offense the Trojans have been able to mount in recent weeks. Ian Smith returns a kickoff for a touchdown at Red Bud last Friday.

The Kahoks as a team finished fifth with a total of 324, missing a trip to Danville by six strokes. Jacksonville took top team honors with a 313, two strokes in front of favored Edwardsville (315) and five shots better than Belleville West's 318. All three teams will compete at Danville this weekend. Quincy was fourth with 321.

"I can't be anything but pleased," Kahok coach Mel Heisen said. "I don't think that anybody even expected us to be here. I can't complain. We have had a great season. The kids accomplished every goal that I set and then some."

Benton's Craig Zinzalieta won medalist honors, while Alton's Chad Randall was second and teammate Brad Tiemann finished third. Greg Louvier of Belleville West captured fourth place.

Other individual state qualifiers include: Decatur, MacArthur's Mike Hurm, Paris' Scott Frazier, O'Fallon's Steve Glazebrook and Belleville West's Chris Sanders.

"We're just too mechanical right now," Yates said. "We're not going out there and making things happen. One win would be then go out and start playing inspired, hustling football. Right now we're just getting tied up with the other team and letting them push us around."

Most of the games the Warriors had a good chance of winning were scheduled during the strike.

"We're playing five, and maybe six, teams that have a shot at going to the playoffs," Yates said. "The boys have to be ready for a tough game each week. We haven't had that game experience and just haven't got to the point where we are ready to play."

Summer '88 nothing to brag about

What a dog, what a mangy, flea-bitten, rabid beast summer was.

I tried to be patient — it's October, for crying out loud, I waited for late-season signs of life from the Redbirds. I waited for the special glow of the Olympics.

Summer had plenty of chances to shine, lots of opportunities to be something besides hot, dry, long and disappointing. It had the baseball season. It had the Olympics. It had golf, tennis and vacations. It had most of the months that are easy to spell. It had everything. And it screwed it all up.

Summer had a thousand chances to redeem itself, and a thousand times it failed to hit the cutoff man. So what do we do now? Personally, I'm kicking it a few final times, dumping it by the side of the road and getting on with whatever season comes next.

First, though, an autopsy: APRIL-MAY: A tip-off of nasty days ahead comes when Ozzie Smith, who makes a skillful bucks a year and is only one miracle shy of becoming the baseball fans' first saint, savages everything that moves in an article in GQ Magazine. This, campers, is not a good sign.

Bad sign II: Cardinals are 5-12 and last in the N.L. East on April 24; only Baltimore, Atlanta and the statues at Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum look deader than the Redbirds. Players are stacked up on the D.L. like cordwood in December.

Good news: The Big Red football fan's first draft on Arizona fan's. Finally, a misery we can share.

JUNE: This is real summer. Real hot. Real nasty.

Mike Tyson, Michael Spinks, Robin Givens, Butch Lewis, Don King. Ninety-one seconds. No mas, already.

Margo Adams' Wade Boggs is supposed to have the best batting eye in baseball. OK. So explain to me why he's cowering with Margo Adams?

Cris Carpenter joins Todd Worrell and Luis Alica in the big time, and the Cardinals thump their chest over the wily ardy they've shown with No. 1 pouncer in the minor league draft. Pounded great in June, but a little tinny in October.

JULY: The bad news: No wins, no rainouts, no punches worth a lick in battle with San Francisco Giants.

The good news: No Billy Martin.

The weather's at its worst and so are the Cardinals. The Redbirds can't buy a win on days that include the letter "a." They're 4-19 in June, a 296 winning percentage, their worst stretch of the year.

AUGUST: Hallelujah! Happy days are here again. Pedro Guerrero arrives. Can Don Mattingly be far behind?

Who's kidding who? SEPTEMBER: The only good thing about being out of a pennant race is that in September you can afford to call up the kids from the minor leagues and see what's there. Did you see anything?

One thing we did see is the Cardinals pass the Cubs in the standings. All right! We're No. 4! We're No. 4!

The Seoul Bowl starts. Pharmaceuticals R Us opens branch office in Athletes Village and Ben Johnson shoulders his way to the front of the line. The U.S. women's track team is a sight to behold. Ditto for Greg Louganis, Janet Evans, Matt Biondi and Jim Abbott. Take your inspiration where you can get it.

Please, stop me before I get to Mary Lou Retton.

OCTOBER: What a way for summer to end. The Big Red look like a football team. Worse, on the last day of the baseball season the Cardinals lose and slip into fifth place behind the Cubs. The Cubs? We're No. 5! We're No. 5!

Summer's over. In a way, I'm going to miss it. Like a boil.

WIDENHOFFER

Badger Bash?

Rolling Illini Hoping To Go 3-0 In Big Ten

By Jim Woodcock
Journal Staff Writer

The football trend at the University of Wisconsin the past several years has been mediocre-to-poor teams from the Badgers, except for one glorious weekend each season.

If the formula holds true in 1988, the Badgers still have their day in the sun ahead of them. And that may be cause for concern for the University of Illinois, who meet the beleaguered Badgers in an 11:05 a.m. game Saturday in Wisconsin's Camp Randall Stadium (KXOK-AM 630).

The Badgers have been somewhat interesting since their last bowl appearance in 1984, if only for their knack of coming up with the biggest upset victory of the Big Ten Conference season. In fact, the last time Wisconsin won a game was Nov. 7, 1987, when a 28-24 upset at home over Ohio State ended the Buckeyes' bid for a Rose Bowl berth.

Despite the annual surprises, the Badgers have managed to find their way to the Big Ten basement in each of the past two seasons following an eighth-place finish in 1985. This year the Badgers have been particularly disappointing—0-2 in the Big Ten and 0-5 overall, including losses at home to obscure opponents Western Michigan and Northern Illinois.

But Illinois coach John Mackovic cannot help but worry whether Wisconsin is finally ripe for the attack.

"Outside of their Michigan game (a 62-17 loss), I think they've played good football," Mackovic said. "They played hard and tough against Miami (a 23-3 loss), which is a great football team, and I think they were in as much of a position to win that game as Miami was. Their Michigan game, like our Washington State game (a 44-7 loss), you have to learn to write some of those games off."

The surprising Fighting Illini, 3-2 overall and 2-0 in the league, are entering the contest in a three-way tie for the conference lead with Michigan and Indiana. With Michigan State (0-4-1) visiting Champaign on Oct. 22, it would appear the Illini have an excellent opportunity in the next two weeks to solidify themselves as conference contenders.

Also, by virtue of last Saturday's 20-0 win over visiting Purdue, the Illini are on a three-game winning streak for the first time since the final three games of their 1983 Rose Bowl season. Of course, such promising tales have been ruined in uncanny fashion by recent Wisconsin clubs.

"We're getting a good effort from our players," said Wisconsin coach Don Morton. "They're working hard, they're hanging in there and their coach is happy. That's all you expect."

"Now we have to find a way to win a football game. When you're 0-5, it's important to get some confidence going early. I know as coaches and players, we're going to find a way to do just that."

Morton said one of his first efforts in that regard would be to study the Illini's running game, which gradually has assumed much of the spotlight initially pointed in sophomore quarterback Jeff George's direction. Last week Illinois rushed for 270 yards and one touchdown against Purdue, compared to 152 yards and one touchdown via

John Conrey Photos

George's arm.

Some of that imbalance can be attributed to Purdue's pass defense, which entered the contest rated No. 1 in the country. But Mackovic likes to remind people that he trumpeted the Illini's backfield of Keith Jones and Howard Griffith early in the season, when George, a redshirt sophomore, was being hailed as the savior of the Illini football program.

"I think our run game has been built around solid line play, and our backs block for each other," Mackovic said. "More than anything, Keith Jones is having the type of year that we believe he deserves because of the hard work and effort he's put in over the years."

Jones, a senior from Webster Groves, rushed for 128 yards against Purdue on 25 carries to give him 540 yards through five games—six yards more than his single-season high in 1986.

"He's been an outstanding team person," Mackovic said. "He's done everything that anyone has asked. He's really been the leader for us and we're really excited that he's had the opportunity to show himself at his best."

Jones' 1-yard touchdown run in the third quarter against Purdue gave Illinois its final score of the afternoon. Griffith, meanwhile, ran for 116 yards against the Boilermakers to mark the second time this season that he and Jones have each rushed for 100 yards or more in a game.

Morton is understandably wary, as much as his Badgers allowed 413 yards on the ground two weeks ago at home against Michigan. At the same time, he's somewhat optimistic that Wisconsin can answer the challenge and perhaps record another stunner.

"(Illinois) is capable of getting on a roll, but we're capable of getting on a roll," said Morton, who led Wisconsin to a 3-8 mark last year in his first season with the Badgers.

"I think our players have done a good job of hanging in there," Morton said. "They're frustrated, and I'm glad they're frustrated. I'd hate to have a group of young people who were 0-5 and weren't frustrated."

Down 1 Quarterback, Widenhofer Still Has 2

By Mark McCall
Journal Staff Writer

With a new attitude, and possibly a new quarterback or two, the University of Missouri will try to get above the 500 mark at 1:30 p.m. Saturday when Iowa State visits Faurot Field.

Saturday's game (WIL-AM 1630, KMOX-AM 1120) is Missouri's homecoming. When last seen by the home folks, the Tigers squandered a 21-7 third-quarter lead en route to a 28-23 tie with nationally ranked Indiana. Missouri then went on the road and was pummeled 35-0 by No. 1 Miami. The loss dropped the Tigers to 1-2-1, and grumbling could be heard across the Show Me State.

But a visit to Kansas State last weekend helped put the wind back in Missouri's sails. Redshirt freshman quarterbacks Brad Fitzmaurice and Corey Welch, who played because junior starter John Stollenwerk was ailing with a shoulder injury, took turns leading the offense against the Wildcats. Both played like veterans as the Tigers scored 52 points, the most ever by a Woody Widenhofer-coached team, in a 52-21 win.

"I was really pleased with the play of our quarterbacks," Widenhofer said. "They played very, very well. Both of them showed a lot of poise."

The play of Fitzmaurice and Welch has left Widenhofer with a pleasant dilemma—deciding which quarterback, or quarterbacks, should run his flexbone offense against Iowa State.

Welch probably is the best athlete of the three quarterbacks. Stollenwerk included. At 6-foot-2, 192 pounds, Welch has 4.6 speed and can turn the corner on the option. Despite having approximately 50 yards worth of runs called back because of penalties, Welch still rushed for 105 yards on 15 carries against Kansas State, including a 49-yard touchdown run. He was 3 for 5 through the air for 130 yards and one touchdown.

Though Fitzmaurice does not run as well as Welch, he is still quick. He averaged a little less than 8 yards per carry against the Wildcats and was 7 for 11 passing. Fitzmaurice led Jefferson City High School to a 26-4 record in the three years he started quarterback.

Stollenwerk, the most experienced of the three, won the job last year from Ronnie Cameron, then solidified the spot by playing well during spring practice. Stollenwerk started out slowly this year, but played well against Indiana. He was hurt early against Miami and did not play at all against Kansas State, other than as the holder for place-kicker Jeff Jacke. Critics say Stollenwerk is too slow to run the option offense.

Widenhofer avoided the quarterback question for the most part during his weekly Big Eight Conference call. He did say that he would play two, not three of the quarterbacks.

"With the option-style offense, you need to have a couple quarterbacks who are ready to play," he said.

While Widenhofer has his quarterback situation to deal with, Iowa State coach Jim Walden is faced with other problems, such as trying to turn a losing program around. Last week, Iowa State squeaked by Northern Iowa 20-17, upping its record to 2-3. Walden, though not impressed with the effort, still has his sense of humor.

"We have a right to play badly, just like a good team does every once in a while," he said. "Just because we can't afford to doesn't mean we can't do it."

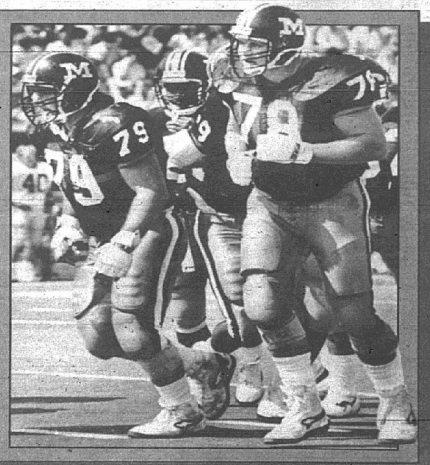

The Cyclones have played fairly well on defense this season, but Walden says the offensive line has been a problem.

His quarterback (Bret Oberg) is out of a junior college, he said. "I think he thinks it's a rule in Division I that you have only 2.1 seconds to pass the ball."

The Cyclones are the only going to get better if they play smarter. He said a win over Missouri, which last year whipped the Cyclones 42-17, would boost morale.

"Beating Missouri is not going to turn this program around," he said. "It would just be a nice win for us."

These linemen will try to keep Cyclones from blowing away—pick a Tigers quarterback—Corey Welch, Brad Fitzmaurice or John Stollenwerk.
